

McGovern awed by flood area

WILKES-Barre, Pa. (UPI)— Sen. George McGovern stood in the rubble of the nation's most costly natural disaster Monday and castigated Richard Nixon for "sluggishness" and "slowness" in responding to the needs of victims of Hurricane Agnes. McGovern, who spent nearly four hours walking dusty roads and surveying scenes of unbelievable devastation, said that if the fighting in Vietnam were stopped for even a few days the money not spent in war could be used to rebuild the entire flood-ravaged area. "Instead of bombing dikes in Haiphong, we ought to be rebuilding dikes in Pennsylvania," he said. McGovern said the nation "does not yet realize the dimensions of the disaster" and compared the devastation to Europe after World War II. His visit marked the beginning of a four-day swing around the country that will take him to Texas for a reunion with former President Lyndon B. Johnson today, and to Chicago for a meeting Wednesday with Mayor Richard Daley. The trip was designed to steal some of the thunder from the Republicans renominating Nixon at Miami Beach. McGovern criticized Nixon for "sluggishness" and "slowness" in responding to the needs of flood victims. He said the President "ought to be spending more time here and less time abroad." McGovern began his tour in neighboring Kingston, where Mr. and Mrs. Al Tefez stood in front of their still-standing brick split-level house. The couple said that even if they raised the $70,000 needed to repair its collapsed roof and interior walls, they were not sure they wanted to return to a neighborhood plagued by rats and disease. Across the street, Vincent Goulston, whose home was knocked off its foundation into its own basement, had an upside-down American flag on his lawn—the signal of distress. He told McGovern: "I've got two brothers in Vietnam. They've been in a hell hole. Now they'll come back to a hell hole." Another resident of the area gave McGovern a penny contribution "for President Nixon's campaign." In both Kingston and Wilkes-Barre, McGovern walked and drove past block after block of twisted and broken houses. The smell of sewage was in the air. People clutched at his hand and ran alongside, beckoning the candidate to come and see their ravaged homes. Sara Holtzman, 64, who lost her classical record collection and books and paintings when the flood swept through her apartment, wept as she told McGovern she did not know how she would be able to start over again on her small disability paycheck. The candidate put his arm around her waist and said:

"I think it's going to come out all right." McGovern, in a meeting with flood victims at the Hotel Sterling, said the federal government had a responsibility in such tragedies to help the victims. He said the government "should consider full restitution of the property to be restored" in the absence of private insurance. He said he did not know how much this would cost. "It just makes the folly of Vietnam all the more painful to realize that we are wasting money over there destroying people that we ought to have at work here rebuilding Pennsylvania and rebuilding the Middle Atlantic states," he said.

Democratic presidential candidate Sen. George McGovern listens to the problems facing Mrs. Ann Fink of Charles Street in South Wilkes-Barre, the street where the dikes first broke during Tropical Storm Agnes. Her home sprawls drunkenly in the background, a total loss. (UPI Telephoto)

Blast starts convention

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Squelching all anti-Nixon dissent and nearing compromise on a pesky rules dispute, Republicans opened their 1972 convention Monday lambasting George S. McGovern as a wild-eyed radical and urging Democrats to defect. After two hours of pro-Nixon, anti-McGovern oratory on prime evening television time, the convention roared its approval of a resolution by Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe inviting Democrats "who have been excluded or deserted by the new leaders of their own party" to join in re-electing the President. Then a band rang the rafters with the traditional Democratic campaign song, "Happy Days Are Here Again," and First Lady Pat Nixon appeared on the rostrum to thank wildly cheering delegates for "a wonderful evening." But it was Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, who led the GOP to devastating defeat in 1964, who brought delegates to their feet with a roar. Speaking at the personal request of President Nixon, the Arizona conservative made a slashing attack on McGovern's "Socialistic promises" and charged that the Democratic nominee "has already surrendered to the enemy before the election has even been held." The GOP delegates rose repeatedly

Flood bills delayed

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Objections from Senate Republicans to some flood relief bills forced a delay Monday in consideration of Gov. Milton J. Shapp's flood package. Senate leaders had planned to hold a "token" session Monday so five bills could be placed in position for a final vote today. But instead, the chamber was gavelled in and out in less than five minutes. No business was conducted. Republican Leader Sen. Robert D. Fleming, D-Allegheny, said some GOP senators "wanted a chance to study these bills before we go ahead." He said the strongest opposition was to a bill which would create a special state land development agency. The agency would undertake projects similar to federal urban renewal projects. It could buy up land in a community then rebuild the area according to a state plan. Shapp has called it "the single most dramatic source of renewal available to our local communities." "A lot of our people think it goes far beyond the scope of flood relief," Fleming said. "I don't think it will be moved up."

Prepares for nomination

Nixon pays visit to Mamie

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (UPI)— President Nixon made a surprise visit to the home of Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower Monday and strolled arm-in-arm with her as they chatted about her late husband's presidency and his nomination by the Republicans two decades ago. Nixon, who had been staying at his Camp David retreat in Thurmont, Md., made the 20 mile trip to Gettysburg by helicopter and visited with Mrs. Eisenhower for about 50 minutes before returning to Washington. Today, the President will fly to Miami Beach to accept renomination for his own second term. Nixon and the former First Lady chatted privately on the glassed-in sun porch of her white brick farmhouse, then strolled arm-in-arm across the

Cubans confront protestors

MIAMI BEACH — More than 1,000 of Florida's militant anti-Castro Cuban exiles marched on Convention Hall Monday night, confronting at least four groups of ragged young antiwar demonstrators who had already converged there on the opening day of the Republican National Convention. Police separated the bitterly opposed groups after one brief fight, and the Cuban rally broke up peacefully 20 minutes later. Earlier story, page 2.

Better than House sharing bill

Senate more generous to area

By GLENN RITT
Ottaway News Service
Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Monroe and Pike Counties would gain appreciably under the Senate's revenue sharing bill, as compared with the previously-passed House version. The State of Pennsylvania also stands to gain nearly $47 million more in revenue sharing funds under the Senate plan, figures released last week by the Senate Finance Committee reveal. Pennsylvania would receive $347.6 million, with $115.9 million going to the state government and $231.7 million distributed to county, town and city governments, under the Senate bill. The Senate plan also would distribute a total of $794,341 to all governments in Monroe County, including $469,078 directly to the county seat. These figures are compared with proposed House allocations of $529,077 and $312,433 respectively. Likewise, all governments in Pike County would receive $190,548 under the Senate bill, of which $88,209 would go directly to the Pike County government.

Under the House plan, Pike County government would receive $63,001. Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg would also gain significantly under the Senate Finance Committee formula. Stroudsburg would receive $65,053 from the Senate bill, and East Stroudsburg would gain $91,873. The House version passed last June 22 would distribute $40,076 to Stroudsburg and $64,445 to East Stroudsburg. The increased allotments for the two counties and their localities under the Senate plan are due, a committee staff aide said, to a new emphasis on rural areas. The Senate committee, in marking up its revenue sharing bill, apparently stressed economic "need" more than the House did, the aide said. The revenue sharing formula made public last week by the finance committee emphasizes "relative income" to assure that "needs of rural areas which usually have relatively low income levels will be adequately dealt with," a committee report read.

President's in; how about a governor?

By TIM METZ
Ottaway News Service
MIAMI BEACH — This may be a national GOP convention, but for the Pennsylvania delegation, there's plenty of behind-the-scenes state-level politicking underway. And while the national news media speculate about who the party's presidential nominee will be in 1976, many Pennsylvania Republicans have another question in mind — namely, who will carry the GOP's standard into the 1974 battle to unseat Democratic Gov. Milton J. Shapp? Shapp, the Republican thinking goes, is "ripe" for a shellacking in the '74 race. "Whether he likes it or not, he's going to go into that election carrying the burden of having been the governor who brought an income tax to Pennsylvania," said state GOP Chairman Clifford Jones in a recent interview. "And add his own internal party troubles to that and you come up with the conclusion that he'll be eminently beatable in '74," Jones said. Thus, the question of who carries the GOP endorsement into that '74 race becomes of more than passing interest. Right now, the odds-on favorite for that honor appears to be Arlen Specter, the hard-driving young Philadelphia district attorney. While Jones declines to say Specter has an inside track, there have been signs aplenty here that he'll be given special consideration. For example, when Mrs. Richard Nixon appeared at the Monday morning Pennsylvania caucus, Specter was quickly inserted in a receiving line at the door with Sen. Hugh Scott and top state organization and delegation officials, even though he is attending the convention merely as a district delegate from Philadelphia. Even so, there's a rising hope — especially among some central Pennsylvania delegates — that this region of the state may wind up with its first gubernatorial standard-bearer in modern GOP history. That could be Stanley A. Miller, a Harrisburg businessman who runs a chain of 17 auto accessories stores (including one in Sunbury and another in Shamokin). Miller, in his 50s, has wide background in the party and is apparently highly regarded even by such reportedly pro-Specter men as Jones, who entrusted the Pennsylvania

Needed for flood areas

Shapp urges sharing bills

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Gov. Milton J. Shapp told the Pennsylvania League of Cities Monday that revenue sharing bills in the state legislature and Congress must be passed to assist communities struck by tropical storm Agnes.

Shapp, in urging the league to lobby for such bills, said "the falloff in local revenues due to flood damage could be crippling without firm agreement by the federal government to reimburse the local communities for lost revenue."

Shapp told the convention attended by mayors, councilmen and city administrators he had asked the state legislature for revenue sharing in the areas of court costs and child assistance but was turned down.

Shapp added, "I greatly regret the fact that these measures were reduced in the budget, but I want you to know that I am ready and willing to work with convention. Demonstrators were kept from the grounds by barbed wire fences.

you in finding additional ways in which the state can be of assistance to its local communities."

Shapp spoke at the four-day opening session which also included a panel discussion by three members of his cabinet.

They were Walter Rader, secretary of commerce; William H. Wilcox, chief of the Department of Community Affairs, and Jacob Kassab, secretary of transportation. The moderator of the panel was Gordon Payrow, Jr., mayor of Bethlehem.

Both the U.S. Senate and House have approved a federal revenue sharing bill but there are substantial differences in the two versions and a conference committee has been appointed to work out an agreement.

Shapp told the convention delegates they should fight for the provision which would make revenue sharing retroactive to the beginning of the current fiscal year.

Anti-war priest, brother protest sentencing delay

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Paroled antiwar priest Daniel Berrigan began a vigil and fast Monday to protest a 19-week delay in sentencing of his brother, Philip, on charges of smuggling letters out of prison.

Daniel and another brother, Jerome, camped on the steps of the federal building where Philip and six other persons were acquitted of charges they conspired to kidnap presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and blow up heating tunnels in Washington.

The jury could not agree on the conspiracy charges, but it found Father Philip and Sister Elizabeth McAlister guilty of illegally smuggling letters in and out of the Lewisburg, Pa., federal prison during 1970.

U. S. District Judge R. Dixon Herman who presided over the 11-week trial, has not set a sentencing date.

"We'll leave these steps when the judge says Philip will be sentenced for those two infamous letters," Daniel said. He said Herman had told him a date would be set sometime during August.

"It is our belief that our brother is being held hostage to the Nixon War administration," he said. "He is being held hostage because I am free and speaking out against the war."

"The administration doesn't want two of us speaking out at once."

Philip, a Josephite, and Daniel, a Jesuit, both were convicted of destroying draft records in Maryland. Daniel was paroled last March, but Philip was turned down because of his involvement in the Harrisburg Seven trial.

Terry F. Lenzner, one of the defense attorneys, said the delay was "unprecedented in American courts."

"In courts which have been twice as busy, the time between conviction and sentencing is normally no more than one month," he said.

Space observatory performs 'on money'

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — The new space observatory Copernicus passed its initial tests in orbit Monday and was pronounced "right on the money" for man's most promising look into the depths of the universe.

"It's a terribly exciting adventure in astronomy—to look at interstellar gas and the atmospheres of stars in ways that are quite impossible from the ground," said Dr. Lyman Spitzer, Princeton University astronomer in charge of the record 32-inch diameter telescope aboard the satellite.

"We hope, if the equipment works the way we expect, we'll find all sorts of interesting and exciting new things," he said.

The 4,900-pound spacecraft, resembling a silver bat, soared into a perfect orbit 460 to 465 miles high. Its vantage point is well above earth's atmosphere

Oil firms, Mideast deal set

BEIRUT (UPI) — Seven of the West's major petroleum companies worked out final details Monday for granting concessions to five Middle East governments in order to avert a world oil supply crisis.

The companies agreed to the concessions during weekend negotiations with representatives from five Arab oil-producing countries that have demanded a minimum 20 per cent share in the firms' operations on their territory, conference sources said.

The sources described the concessions as "major."

Company representatives and experts met Monday at a plush mountain-top hotel near this Lebanese capital to refine further the details of agreements, the sources said.

Officially, both sides said only that progress had been made in the latest talks.

The companies—Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California, Texaco, Mobil, British Petroleum, Shell and CFP of France—have agreed in principle to the participation demands of Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Kuwait, Abu Dhabi and Qatar.

Fischer gets sore again

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — Spectator noise at the world chess championship match has Bobby Fischer so angry that he may present an ultimatum before the next game to move the board to a private room, U.S. sources said Monday.

The sources said Fischer asked his aide, Fred Cramer, to draft a new protest to referee Lothar Schmid early Monday. The challenger then went bowling with U.S. Grandmaster Lubomir Kavalec.

"Yes, Bobby is very angry," Cramer said. "He told me there was no excuse for the amount of noise in the hall during Sunday's game. He said he could not concentrate properly." The game, the 16th of the match, ended in a draw.

GOP platform plank may start gold rush

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Private ownership of gold, advocated by the proposed Republican platform, could touch off a new gold rush in the West.

"At $100 an ounce, a lot of old mines would get a very serious looking at," says Wesley G. Bruer, geologist for the California Department of Mines. "The capital investment of opening an old mine is pretty fantastic."

The $100 turning point also was given by mining officials in several states and by Sen. Gordon Allott of Colorado, co-chairman of the GOP platform committee.

"If the price reaches that level, the crazy fever of the 1860s would be claiming victims

Anti-war Vietnam vets hit Guardsmen's bastion

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Led by three veterans in wheelchairs, an estimated 1,500 antiwar Vietnam veterans and their supporters Monday surrounded a high school where Florida National Guardsmen called out for the Republican National Convention were billeted.

Police said six persons were arrested on the roof of the school where the guard had its communications equipment, and another man for taking his clothes off and turning hand-springs in advance of the march.

But the second major demonstration of the convention generally was orderly, and there were no injuries.

As the Guardsmen inside peered through windows, some flashing peace signs and clenched-fist solidarity salutes to the demonstrators, a protester with a bullhorn shouted to them:

"We've come to Miami Beach to tell the American people that Nixon is a liar, that Nixon is committing crimes against humanity, that we won't be intimidated."

At one point the marchers met face-to-face with the Rev. Carl McIntire, the pro-war evangelist, and about 40 of his supporters, carrying signs reading: "Believe in the Pentagon" and "In God We Trust."

McIntire's marchers remained silent but the veterans jeered at them, yelled and gestured obscenities. One of the signs of a McIntire marcher was torn from his hand, but he offered no resistance. The veterans then moved on.

A three-piece musical group including "Henry the Fiddler," a favorite of the antiwar protesters, and rock band drummer Ollie Santana played "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home Again."

A solid line of veterans ringed the school. Others sprawled on the grass or wandered about the spacious lawn.

Grand Old Party still likes Ike

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — The Grand Old Party paid tribute Monday to its grand old man, the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower, whose ailing widow urged Republicans in a filmed appearance to work for the re-election of President Nixon.

"I'd sort of like to have you all come and sit here on the porch with me where Ike and I spent so many happy hours and where we could sit and look at the green trees and the grass and angus cattle still up here on the fields," said Mamie, 75, from her Gettysburg, Pa., farm.

Saying she did not like to quote her late husband too often, Mrs. Eisenhower nonetheless recalled he often said to her, "four years is not long enough for any President to try to put together what he wants for the good of this country or trying to carry out his campaign promises, he needs all of the eight years to do this."

"So let's all get behind Mr. Nixon and see that he is re-elected for that other four years," she urged.

Wheat allotment notices received by county farmers

STROUDSBURG — Notices of 1973 wheat allotments and an official explanation of the 1973 wheat set-aside program have been mailed to producers in Monroe County.

All participants will set aside an acreage equal to 86 per cent of their farm domestic allotment, will earn wheat certificate payments based on their domestic allotment and will be eligible for commodity credit corporation loans on wheat grown on participating farms.

An additional set-aside option also is offered, according to William Baumgartner, chairman of the County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee (ASC).

"Contingent upon their 1972 wheat acreage, producers may set aside an additional acreage up to 150 per cent of their domestic wheat allotment in return for a payment of 88 cents a bushel times established yield times acres of additional set-aside," Baumgartner said.

A producer who accepts the additional set-aside option also agrees to limit his production of 1973 wheat. The limitation is determined by the formula: 1972 spring and winter wheat planted acreage on the farm plus any 1972 additional set-aside, minus the 1973 additional set-aside.

"The big point to make at this time is that a wheat grower in the 1973 wheat program can go one of two ways: One — maintain required set-aside, additional set-aside and conserving base acreages and limit his wheat acreage," the ASC chairman said.

A number of other important items are covered in the official explanation, including a reminder that 1973 is the year when a farmer who did not plant a program crop during the past two seasons can lose his allotment if he fails to plant for a third successive year.

Substitution provisions are spelled out. Soybeans, corn, grain sorghum and barley may be substituted for wheat to preserve allotment history.

"Then, too, I want to remind producers that set-aside acreage — both the required and any additional set-aside — must be of the same average quality as the other cropland on the farm," Baumgartner said.

Producers may ask the set-aside inspection and measurement service from the county ASCS office in order to assure themselves well ahead of time that set-aside land is acceptable.

This service is offered at a minimal cost.

Allotment notices to wheat producers are sent several months before sign-up, at which time farmers give official notice of their intent to participate in the set-aside program and designate their set-aside acreage. The official sign-up period has not yet been announced.

Warning given on company

HARRISBURG — State Rep. Philip Ruggiero, D-Northampton County, has warned area residents to be wary of a firm now operating in Northampton County which has been banned in Lehigh County.

Both the firm "American Be Independent" and the man who controls it, James E. Tolleson, have been proceeded against in Lehigh County Common Pleas Court.

The action was taken, according to Ruggiero, as a result of the district attorney's investigation into the corporate activities of Glenn W. Turner and his "Dare to be Great" enterprise.

Ruggiero explained the court then issued an injunction against Turner and all of his associates and subsidiaries, prohibiting them from conducting business in Lehigh County on the basis of false advertising, deception and violation of the Pennsylvania Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Law.

In that proceeding, the court found Tolleson's "Americans Be Independent" and two other organizations he controls, "Kosco Interplanetary, Inc." and "Empire Enterprises, Inc." are all part of the "Dare to be Great" network.

"Some of the residents in my district have received letters of solicitation from Tolleson acting as 'American Be Independent,'" said Ruggiero.

He warned persons receiving such correspondence from Tolleson's firm or any other enterprise to be cautious.

Four seek teamsters' aid

Road crew to vote on union

EASTON — Shortly after Sept. 1, four lower Mount Bethel Township road maintenance employees will take part in an election to determine if the Teamsters' Union will be their bargaining agent with the township.

The election was authorized by the Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board following a hearing in the Northampton County Courthouse. No date was set for the election by the PLRB, but indications were that it would take place sometime after the first of next month.

The four employees, Herbert Ruch, John Sabatine, Frank Sabatine and Elwood Savitz, had petitioned the PLRB for representation by the union.

They have signed authorization cards to become members of Local 773 of the union, but an election is required to certify the union as their bargaining agent.

Francis M. Mulligan, PLRB examiner, said the bargaining unit represents all eligible township employees allowed by law.

He pointed out there is no fragmentation of township employees because of the bid for union membership.

William Cassebaum, township solicitor, said Philip Sabatine, roadmaster, is not eligible to become a member of the union because of his elected supervisory position.

Savit, who is parttime secretary-treasurer to the board of supervisors of the township, is eligible to become a union member because his position is an appointed one.

Cassebaum said Savitz would not have to resign his secretary-treasurer's job if he joins the union. However, the solicitor pointed out that if Savitz is successful in his quest to be appointed township supervisor, he would have to resign from the union because of a possible conflict of interest.

Savit was one of five men who have petitioned the Northampton County Court to fill a vacancy on the board of supervisors.

No testimony was taken during the PLRB hearing because Cassebaum and Steven Richman, attorney for the union, agreed on all provisions in the petition to the PLRB.

The provisions agreed on by the attorneys included naming Teamsters Union Local 773 as the desired bargaining agent; stating that the men were employees of the township; and that there were four employees involved in the action.

Cassebaum pointed out the township has not taken a stand either in opposition or support for the men's desires to join the union.

He said the petition had been submitted to the PLRB prior to the employees' indicating to the township their interest in joining the union.

He added that had the township joined in the petition to have the local as the bargaining agent for the employees, it would not have been necessary to hold an election.

Indications are that if the union is named the bargaining agent for the four employees, wage negotiations will begin almost immediately following the election to allow the supervisors to include the new wages in the 1973 budget which must be drawn up prior to the beginning of next year.

Paupack pollution discussed

LAKE ARIEL — The subject of boats equipped with heads, potentially a serious source of pollution on Lake Wallenpaupack, was one of the topics of discussion at a meeting of the board of directors of the Lake Wallenpaupack Watershed Ecological Association at the Lake Ariel home of A.G. Petrasek, president of the association.

It was noted that the Pennsylvania Power & Light Co., owner of Lake Wallenpaupack, has prohibited the use of boats with such equipment.

Another topic of discussion was the issuance of the next edition of the Ecological Association's newsletter. It was decided to include in this newsletter a questionnaire giving members an opportunity to voice their opinions as to the direction the efforts of the association should take.

At the suggestion of David Walker, executive director of Wallenpaupack Lake Estates, a meeting of the board of directors with Walker was approved to be held sometime in the near future.

New suspension program sound

The decision by the Stroudsburg Area School Board to do away with that hoary old punishment called "suspension" is a sound one.

We remember with dismaying clarity the young hellions with whom we went to school. They carried on, caring little for the discipline of the classroom and less for its educational offerings, and when the law caught up with them they were suspended.

Do you remember what suspension meant? Sometimes, a good clobbering from an irate father and tears from the mother. Sometimes not. But always a vacation from school — Exactly what those little troublemakers were making trouble for in the first place!

Not any more in Stroudsburg. Students with disciplinary problems will still be removed from class to keep from distracting the other students, but they won't get out of school. They will participate in study programs geared to help the problem child, not cast him adrift.

Face it. Few youngsters cause the type of trouble (persistent absenteeism, skipping classes, violating school rules) that brings about the drastic measure of suspension do such things for no reason at all. They are disturbed children in one way or another. It makes far more sense to work even more closely with the child, to find out what makes him behave the way he does and to work out a rehabilitative program than to just toss him out on his ear for three days or so.

That's a cop-out, as the kids say today. That's washing your hands of the problem rather than coming to grips with it. And that's not good for the child, the school or the community.

We consider the cost of the in-school suspension program a worthwhile expenditure. Teacher reaction — overwhelmingly affirmative — supports that contention.

We will be watching this program and its progress, and we suggest that other school districts would do well to watch it, too. If it works at Stroudsburg, it could work elsewhere, too. Stroudsburg, after all, isn't alone in having its problem students.

Grand Old Party time

We should think, if President Nixon were as cost-conscious as his wage and price controls lead us to believe, he would have done the noble thing and dispensed with the Republican National Convention this year.

How much less expensive for him to have persuaded the Grand Old Party nabobs to just buy some prime-time television spots for himself and Spiro Agnew and maybe a few other fulminating types.

Because that's just about what this convention amounts to — a battery of speeches and demonstrations (on the floor, that is; the GOP doesn't really want the outdoors kind) carefully orchestrated to catch the viewer during the prime viewing hours.

Just think of the savings in hotel bills, telephone tolls, convention hall rental and conversion, signs, bands... the list goes on and on.

The GOP could contribute that money to its favorite charity. (Come to think of it, in the interest of fair play, the Republicans could toss some money to the Democrats; they are a real charity case this year!)

But there are no savings. It has become a tradition in American politics to have a convention and, by golly, we're going to have one! No matter if there is no real business for the convention delegates to transact.

Well, maybe it's good to have a bash for the grass-roots workers every four years. How many people would get to Miami Beach if they weren't delegates to the convention or demonstrators protesting against it (of course, this isn't the best time to visit southern Florida — too hot!).

Calling a political organization a party is so much more appropriate this year!

'Windmill' on treadmill

He was a carpenter in the old country. August von der Planck was also a drinker. He was a big hearty man, a Dutchman with a stomach that swung, independently, like a windmill. He smoked a droopy pipe and, when he roared laughing, which was often, he tilted his head back, squinted his eyes tight, put both hands on his belly, and let go. It often peeled paint two saloons away.

When he came to America, he had a grim little Dutch wife and no children. In time, they increased the population of America by six. August von der Planck took the first job he could get: he ran a trolley car in the Middle West.

They gave him a blue uniform, a peaked cap a size and half too small, and showed him how to make the trolley go and stop, and how to collect quarters. On his first run, they sent him to the far end of town, and August not only stopped for a lot of cash customers, he also lifted his cap to each one, bid them the time of day, and asked after the health of the kinder.

Fleeing Dutchman

Two hours later, there was excitement at the car barns. The trolleys that had left after August were now back, but there was no sign of the Dutchman. This, as the foreman knew, was an impossibility. He should have gone to the end of the line, turned around, and headed to the terminal, with about three dollars in quarters.

It was embarrassing to send out search parties for a trolley, but it had to be done. Inspectors asked passersby if they had seen one used yellow trolley car manned by a mad Dutchman with crayon yellow hair and a weight of 310 pounds. No one had seen such a phenomenon. A local newspaper got the story and the traction company was irritated.

Two days later, August came back. His eyes were red and his mouth puffed open and shut like a fat fish. He made a rude suggestion to the foreman about the job while lugging a gray sack of quarters off the trolley. It came to more than $200. Somebody had forgotten to tell August how to turn the trolley around. He found a siding switch, and had gone through two Midwestern states before someone had thought to offer him a drink and advise him to turn around and go home.

August did well in the new country after that. He set up a small construction company and built houses. It was called Planck's Bonded Homes. August prospered. He loved his wife and his children and gave them the best. He drank the best and, in his city, when he came home loaded, roaring and swaying down the street, no one got excited. Some turned over in bed and said: "Must be closing hour."

His children were grown when August got in the habit of getting drunk at home on Saturday nights. About ten o'clock, when all the children were out, he would knock out the partitions between their rooms, and rebuild them in another way.

Mrs. von der Planck, a patient saint, used to sit and shake her head, her eyes on the little hooked needle and the antimacassar in her hands. When the rooms were all changed around, and the floor was littered with hunks of plywood, August would kiss mamma Gute Nacht and stagger off to bed.

Lumps and bruises

At some hour in the morning, the children would tiptoe in, a few with shoes in hand. In the dark, they would head for their rooms. In an instant there would be crashing sounds and mean mutterings. On Sunday morning, the von der Planck kids often had lumps and bruised faces. They also had a few grim glances for their father.

August liked to go fishing in the summer, although he never learned to swim. He said that it was enough that the fish had learned. He would sit by the hour with a bait box and a couple of fifths and a cold loin of pork. He would fish and belch and, when he reeled a fish to the surface, his booming laugh sounded like a well-hit strike in a bowling alley.

He's gone now, but I miss him. A few summers ago, he reached his net out a little too far to get a fish. It is saddening to think that he made his final exit drinking water. Still, it was a rare day: the first of July and the last of August.

Chronically ill

The chronically ill person — child, adolescent, or adult — can sometimes tyrannize an entire family. His medical condition can become the central focus that affects the social patterns of the family. Sometimes the sick who have completely recovered from an illness strive to perpetuate the dominance they attained while sick.

I know a 14-year-old girl who suffers from bouts of ulcerative colitis, an intestinal condition of severity. When she is in an acute phase of the illness, everything revolves around her because the family is so concerned.

When she is well and is in a period of remission, characteristic of this disease, she hates to give up her acquired importance. It takes a great deal of guidance to return such a family to a normal way of living.

The world of the sick is a special one. At first, anxiety about the disease is overwhelming. Later, come the emotional tensions and social economic strains. The patient himself seems to make his world narrower and narrower. There can be a loss of contact with friends, activity, sports, and eventually there is even separation from the immediate family.

The girl with colitis concentrated all her attentions on meal time, temperature time, and medication time. She was the key figure in this contracted world. Her total self-absorption seemed to blot out the needs of all the other people.

Almost in a remarkable way, the personality of the sick is a throwback that resembles the actions of an infant where the entire world revolves about satisfying his fundamental needs.

So subtle is the progressive social degeneration of the family that sometimes it is barely discernible. It is for this reason that every person with a long, protracted illness must be given, in addition to his medication, psychological support, counsel, and orientation to the new world of being sick.

The tendency to exploit illness and capitalize on it must be stopped before it becomes a fixed pattern of behavior. People often are not courageous enough to lay down stringent rules that might seem to be a source of distress to the patient. Their own guilt, that ever present, dominant emotion, establishes a trap from which it is difficult to be extricated.

The sick have a right to be indulged during the acute phase of an illness. It is imperative, however, that a family return to its normal way of life.

Alcoholism in the adolescent and violence and aggression in American life have reached proportions that demand immediate action.

I was pleased to learn that at the meetings of the American Medical Association highly specialized groups will concentrate their attention on these vital and almost alarming problems.

Perhaps words and rhetoric about these epidemic problems will soon be replaced by concrete plans of attack. Up to now, the mass destruction of our youth by drugs, alcohol, venereal disease, antisocial behavior patterns and school dropouts has called forth philosophical speculation, sincerely motivated programs, well-endowed studies, but with results that are far from adequate.

All of us hope that some solution is in the offing to help stem the destructive tide that envelops and destroys the potential of so many of our young people.

Letters to the Editor

Trying to fight pollution

Editor, The Record:

Pollution is everywhere and people like you and me are the cause of it. We continue to throw our garbage on the ground, in the water, and everywhere else but in the garbage cans where it really belongs.

I often heard people say "Put your trash in the garbage can."

But five minutes later, I would be walking down the street eating a candy bar and wherever I happened to be I'd just drop the papers.

I really wanted to help fight pollution, but the tiny papers were too "heavy" for me to carry to the garbage can!

One day I was watching "Pop," a musical special on television. Guest star Davey Jones came out and started to talk about pollution and what it was doing to us. He really got me thinking. I decided no paper is going to be too "heavy" for me to carry to the garbage can anymore.

Most people both young and old think the way I thought. "I'll drop a few papers. What's a few papers? I'll drop them and they'll pick them up."

If everyone thinks this way, everyone will be dropping them, but nobody will be picking them up. Now I make it a point to pick up the papers I see.

At least I can say I'm trying. Can you?

About those phone tolls...

Editor, The Record:

I agree wholeheartedly with the letter from "Concerned C.T.C. Subscriber" published in the Aug. 8 edition of the Pocono Record.

Besides the calls to Stroudsburg it is also necessary to make frequent calls outside the Pocono Lake area right on top of the mountain.

It is often necessary to call a dentist, doctor or drug store in Mount Pocono. And besides the unfair toll charges mentioned already, there is also the tax to consider.

Perhaps subscribers in this area should get together a petition to Commonwealth Telephone Company to remove those unfair toll charges.

How about some of the civic organizations in this area giving this some serious consideration?

OVERCHARGED

...let's do something...

Editor, The Record:

I, for one, agree with Mr. Concerned C.T.C. Subscriber, Pocono Pines. My monthly bill is always $40 to $50 and more and I have a private telephone.

Very, very few local calls are made — others are toll (even my service station). I have called Commonwealth Telephone Co. on numerous occasions regarding these tolls but to no avail — surely there must be some way to correct this situation.

I would be willing to pay extra per month to be able to call Mt. Pocono and Stroudsburg without having to worry about 30 cents for three minutes every time I call. Whatever can be done would be greatly appreciated.

ANOTHER CONCERNED C.T.C. SUBSCRIBER
Pocono Pines

...it's getting ridiculous!

Editor, The Record:

I too am a subscriber of the Commonwealth Telephone Co. and my bill is tremendous every month; at least around $30 and this month it was $44. There are always several calls put on that are not made from this number.

Why can't we get our local toll calls taken off? If Bell Telephone can do it, certainly Commonwealth can.

Half the time the phones don't work. They promised us they would help us if we got a petition. Instead we don't get help, only very dear phone bills each month.

We pay enough as it is.

Thanks for TV help

Editor, The Record:

I wish to thank those from East Stroudsburg State College who were in any way associated with the investigation of television problems at Avon Court.

There is a vast improvement in the reception. I am sure Avon Court residents all join me in this letter of gratitude.

Merry-go-round

By JACK ANDERSON

MIAMI BEACH — The man who calls the political shots for President Nixon isn't his campaign manager, Clark MacGregor, but his chief of staff, H. R. Haldeman.

Operating out of the White House on government salary, Haldeman has tried to remain the invisible man of the campaign. But we have established that most of the important campaign decisions have come through him.

The assumption is, of course, that he's acting for the President.

Haldeman issues political directives, approves campaign contracts, receives political reports and coordinates campaign activities.

It was Haldeman, for example, who proposed that a special advertising agency be established to handle the President's campaign advertising.

This unique outfit, known as the November Group, was created for the sole purpose of reelecting Nixon. It is staffed with GOP-minded hucksters carefully recruited from ad agencies all over the country.

Harry Robbins Haldeman, who prefers to be called "Bob," has been an advertising man since he was 23. He has used his quick mind to sell bug killer, floor wax, Disneyland, Seven-Up — and, more recently, Richard Nixon.

Political leave

In election years, Haldeman was able to take time off as vice president and Los Angeles manager of the giant J. Walter Thompson advertising agency to plump for Nixon.

Haldeman toured the country in 1956 as an advance man for the then Vice President, became chief advice man in 1960 when Nixon first sought the presidency, returned to the campaign trail in 1962 to help Nixon lose the governorship of California and, finally, coordinated his successful campaign for the White House in 1968.

Nixon probably relied more heavily on Haldeman than on any other campaign technician during the 1968 race. After the election, Haldeman largely recruited the inner staff that would be around the President.

Briefing the press, Haldeman said there would not be a press secretary, no appointments secretary and no chief of staff. The man who helped merchandise Seven-Up as the "Un-Cola" had invented the un-assistants.

Then he filled the jobs with his own people. Dwight Chapin, one of his J. Walter Thompson underlings, became appointments secretary; Ron Ziegler, another hand from the Los Angeles shop, was named press secretary; and John Erlichman, an old UCLA chum, moved in as another presidential assistant. Haldeman himself became the un-chief of staff.

Having the President's complete trust, Haldeman largely decides who the President will see, who on the staff will be heard, what memorandum will make its way into the President's in-basket and who will be promoted.

"Big L"

Haldeman's own schedule has become so tight that he has acquired his own Haldeman to do for him what he does for Nixon. Haldeman's Haldeman is bright, young Lawrence Higby who prefers to be called "Larry." Among other White House aides, he is known even less formally as "Big L."

Haldeman likes to operate behind a screen. But on occasion, he has ventured forth into political combat. In the turbulent days following the death of Mary Jo Kopechne in Senator Ted Kennedy's automobile, Haldeman was on the telephone to key reporters, urging them to keep the pressure on Kennedy.

At the time, Kennedy appeared to be the most likely Democrat to challenge President Nixon in 1972.

Haldeman is now back behind the screen. But those on the inside say he is the most powerful man in the 1972 campaign, second only to the President himself.

Footnote: The President and the huckster have found that they think alike. As with Nixon, Haldeman grew up in California when it was still the golden state, with orange groves, relatively clean air and a feeling that it was, indeed, the land of promise. His grandfather migrated to California early in the century, made his money as a building supply dealer and started the "Better America Foundation" in 1922. Haldeman's father, echoing the religious fundamentalism of Nixon's Quaker mother, devoted considerable energy to the Salvation Army. Haldeman, however, is a Christian Scientist who has become the President's own Christian Science monitor.

Uncle Tom

Lifelong Democrat Thomas Watson's emergence as a Nixon supporter this year may be more business than politics.

Watson is Chairman of IBM, which presently has a major anti-trust case before the courts. The case was filed as the Democrats were leaving town in 1968 but has failed to come to trial under the Nixon Administration.

Watson's conversion to the Nixon cause has prompted speculation that settlement terms have been reached but that the announcement is being put off until after the election. The Administration obviously doesn't want to cave in publicly on another anti-trust case in mid-campaign.

Mrs. Pat Nixon seems to be backing off from over enthusiastic reception by delegate from New Jersey caucus as the First Lady made a tour of GOP convention delegations. Next stop was the Pennsylvania delegation. (UPI Telephoto)

Visits state delegates

Mrs. Nixon says 'hello'

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Mrs. Pat Nixon visited the Pennsylvania delegation Monday, predicting the Republicans soon will be the majority party.

"Very soon we're going to be a major party," the First Lady told the cheering delegates. "No more minor party for us." Mrs. Nixon wearing a prim blue-and-white dress, said she and her daughters decided to visit the state delegation caucuses "to see the people who do the work."

She said she and her family normally are "whisked in and out" of the cities they visit. "We don't have time to thank you all for the work you do in building the party on the local level," she said.

"I don't have any earthshattering news for you today. Just lots of love."

Mrs. Nixon roamed through the delegation for nearly 15 minutes, shaking hands and signing autographs. She was warmly greeted.

Legree Daniels, state caucus secretary of Harrisburg, told Mrs. Nixon she met the President when he visited the state capital last June 24 during the height of flooding caused by Hurricane Agnes.

"I love your slogan—bigger and better," Mrs. Nixon said, referring to the flood reconstruction campaign.

She indicated she and her family want to visit the flood-damaged areas of Pennsylvania.

Attorney General Richard Klendinst; Helen Medley, chairman of the Federal Maritime Commission; Joe Blatchford, director of the Peace Corps, and Len Garment, special adviser to the Nixon administration, each delivered a pep talk to Pennsylvania's 60 delegates.

"If our great President could do what he's done in four years with a Democratic Congress," Klendinst said, "just think what he can do in another four years with the Republicans controlling the Congress, or at least one House."

Mrs. Medley continued urging the party members not to become complacent. "At the time George McGovern had 3 per cent in the polls," she said, "his people were out there working."

She said she visited women's caucuses throughout the country and McGovern's people were "the only team at those caucuses."

Nixon has appointed 126 women to top-level policy-making positions with salaries over $28,000, Mrs. Medley said, and "many more" in middle management positions.

Blatchford said his predecessor at the Peace Corps, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee Sargent Shriver, "will be going around the country talking about the old days."

"But he is not going to tell you that when he left, the number of volunteer applications were falling by 1,000 per year and the requests from host countries were declining," he said.

Blatchford said those applications now are increasing. The number of agricultural workers has increased from 200 to 2,000 and skilled workers have climbed from 64 to 600.

Pat 'warm, affectionate'

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — (She) is a wonderfully warm, affectionate, marvelous woman, who has raised two mighty fine girls...

The recorded voice of Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, paying tribute to Mrs. Pat Nixon, set the tone Monday for an unprecedented appearance by a first lady before a national political convention.

Mrs. Eisenhower, who chose to remain at her Gettysburg, Pa., farm, sent brief remarks to the convention's opening session in connection with a film cataloging Mrs. Nixon's activities.

Monday night, Mrs. Nixon herself was to address the convention, a historic departure from the tradition that a presidential nominee's wife, even if he is an incumbent, does not appear before the assembled delegates until his nomination.

Like Mrs. Eisenhower's tribute, the film appeared to be in keeping with the poised and carefully proscribed role Mrs. Nixon has played as first lady.

"I'd like to pay a little bit of conversation to the distaff part of the family, Pat Nixon," said Mrs. Eisenhower, "who I think is a wonderfully warm, affectionate, marvelous woman, who has raised two mighty fine girls, one, of course, as you know, I know well. I think we should be very proud to have her representing the distaff part of the family."

The film of Mrs. Nixon to be shown in the bunting-draped convention hall was narrated by actor James Stewart. It was made up of film clips of the first lady on her travels to Africa, China and Russia as well as her active life at the White House.

"It's a good movie, Julie Eisenhower, her youngest daughter, said. "It shows mother doing lots of interesting things." The film was made by White House staff photographers.

The tributes to Mrs. Nixon apparently were designed to kick off her contribution to her husband's re-election effort. She has said she plans to campaign heavily and speak when asked. Already, she has begun to address herself to issues of interest to women, a new departure for her.

The first lady, who has characterized the convention as "very exciting" despite the lack of competition for the President's renomination, said she has been in touch with her husband "every few hours."

GOP platform has flood crisis plank

Ottaway News Service

MIAMI BEACH — The proposed Republican National Platform contains a flood emergency plank.

Approved by the Platform Committee Sunday, the plank calls for broadening eligibility for federal flood insurance and for faster delivery of government disaster relief.

The plank is a link addition to the party's proposed platform to be presented to the convention as a whole this week.

Instrumental in its development were New York Sen. Warren M. Anderson, R-Binghamton and Richard S. Schweiker, a Pennsylvania Delegate-at-large.

Several delegates to the Democratic National Convention here earlier this month tried unsuccessfully to insert a flood emergency plank in their party's platform. The effort, however, failed, not because of a lack of sympathy for the endeavor, but because the Democratic ranks prevented the question from being submitted to the convention as a whole as a minority report.

The Republicans, as well, did not intend to include a flood emergency plank in their platform before arriving at Miami Beach. According to reliable sources however, Anderson and Schweiker, both of whom come from areas that were hard-hit by Tropical Storm Agnes' aftermath, pressed the matter before the Platform Committee. They were successful in getting it approved for submission to the convention as a whole.

The language of the proposed plank was not released Sunday evening, but it reportedly contained two aspects:

—To speed any emergency federal relief available to disaster-hit areas;

—To loosen up eligibility standards for qualification for federal flood insurance.

Anderson said he expected no resistance to the plank at the Florida convention.

He added that there was no apparent lack of federal assistance during the recent flood emergency, but said that the delivery of such aid could have been quicker.

"The federal government was not lax in the recent flood, but the big problem was the means of getting the aid to the people," he said. Anderson noted that the language of the proposed plank would not restrict any legislation along these lines, but said it would encourage a further government involvement in aiding victims of natural disaster.

"We had sufficient procedures during the recent flood," Anderson said, "But we must seek out new ways of making them function more smoothly."

Close look at Pa. delegation

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—The average Pennsylvania delegate to the Republican National Convention is a middle-aged man who has held public office.

But this is probably his first time as a convention delegate.

If this man is not an attorney, he might be a former professional baseball pitcher, a corporate president, a newspaper publisher, one-time consul of Liberia or even the founder of a military academy.

A survey of the 60-member Pennsylvania delegation shows just four of the delegates are under 30 years old. Sixteen are over 60 and only six are women.

Almost all of the delegates are veteran workers in the Republican party and at least 24 of them have held public office on a local, state or national level. Only 12 have been delegates to earlier GOP conventions.

One delegate, Roger V. Wiest, an attorney from Sunbury, admitted he is a newcomer to party politics. "This is my first encounter," he said.

Even the four delegates who are under 30 are experienced in the ways of politics. They are:

Sen. Robert Rovner, 28, of Philadelphia; Andrew J. Sordani III, 29, of Kingston, who worked on Nelson Rockefeller's staff in 1968; David E. Wade, 28, of Harrisburg, editor and publisher of the Port Royal Times, and Thomas E. Shafer, 21, a student from Rochester.

Although a few delegates were reluctant to admit their age, the oldest area 79. They are Thomas B. McCabe, chairman of the board of Scott Paper Co. and a national committeeman, and Morton Witkin, an attorney since 1918.

Witkin served as a state legislator for 10 years, beginning in 1927, and also was a Philadelphia County Commissioner until 1952. He has been attending GOP conventions since 1932.

Hobson R. Reynolds, 73, of Philadelphia, returns to the convention as a delegate for the first time since 1952, when he delivered a seconding speech for the nomination of Dwight D. Eisenhower for president.

A state legislator in the 1930s, Reynolds was an observer to the founding of the United Nations and a consul of Liberia.

He serves as chairman of the Cheyney State College board of trustees and a board member of the Urban League.

Milton G. Baker, 72, of Wayne, also began attending GOP conventions as a delegate in 1952 when he was an honorary sergeant-at-arms.

He is founder of Valley Forge Military Academy and has been inaugural committee chairman for three Pennsylvania governors — beginning with Gov. George H. Earle in 1935.

There is only one former baseball player in the delegation — Bob Friend, long-time pitcher for the Pittsburgh Pirates. Friends is controller of Allegheny County. This is his first time as a convention delegate.

The women delegates include Marjorie Broderick, wife of former Lt. Gov. Raymond Broderick.

Five state legislators are serving as delegates — Rovner, Stanley G. Stroup, Robert D. Fleming, James J. Wright and H. Harrison Haskell.

Rep. Kenneth B. Lee is an alternate.

These legislators planned to attend the convention despite a special session of the General Assembly. Democratic leaders earlier offered to recess the legislature during this week.

But the six GOP legislators refused.

Trees bigger, friends friendlier

STROUDSBURG — "I've seen so many changes . . . Sometimes I feel a little sad. One time we had such a beautiful town. Those days everybody was your friend and neighbor. Now sometimes I can sit here a whole afternoon and not see anybody I know," mused Mrs. Lizzie Koch as she sat in the sun on her favorite bench on Main Street.

Mrs. Koch who lives at 728 A Main Street, is celebrating her 90th birthday today, and she says "I was raised on Main Street, you know".

Actually she was born on North Ninth St. and as Lizzie Fabel was the oldest of nine children. Her family had a grocery store where the Christian Science Reading Room is now and at 16 she went to work in the store.

"Those days I worked the hardest," she recalls. But she has always worked hard, and that work was closely bound to Main Street.

She and her husband, the late Ottmar F. Koch, opened the first movie in town in 1907 called the Nikelette for which admission was a nickel. Later they opened the Bijou where Rea and Derick store is now and had to raise the price from a nickel to a dime.

People thought it was awful," she remembers.

Later she worked in Wyckoff's Store for 36 years.

"The hats I've sold," and how nice people used to look in them. I can remember when we never went out on the street without a hat with a veil." She recalls watching the people in shorts, sweat shirts and sandals passing by.

But she finds changes in more than appearances. "We were friendlier then, and it didn't matter how much money you had. With a dime tied up in our handkerchiefs, we were rich. We could ride the trolley over to East Stroudsburg and think we'd been on a journey."

"For 50 cents an hour we could hire a horse and carriage at the livery stable back of the American House and ride out in the country."

"I just wish people could see my scrapbooks and see how beautiful this used to be. Some of our nice buildings have been torn down, and Still interested in her fellow men, Mrs. Lizzie Koch who will be 90 today sits on her favorite bench on Main Street, reflecting on the changes she has seen.

while these new trees are a help they aren't like the big trees that used to shade the whole street. And the firemen used to water them every two weeks."

She remembers the horse cars and the trolley; where the ice cream parlors were and the picket fences along the homes on Main Street.

Always interested in animals, Mrs. Koch was a charter member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and has scrapbooks on animals, too.

However, the nostalgia for the past doesn't keep Mrs. Koch from enjoying the present, and every day from 2:30 to 4 or 5 she seeks out the bench in front of Wyckoff's to share in the life of the town she has known so long.

"I'm very fortunate," she says "in being able to keep up my own home. Although I don't clean the way I used to. Nowadays it's more of a lick and a promise," she adds with a laugh.

However, she did enjoy her 90th birthday party on Sunday at the home of her son, Victor Koch, a party in which she shared birthday honors with her son and his father-in-law, Harry Hoffman since they all have birthdays within the week.

The Slim Gourmet

By BARBARA GIBBONS

In a hurry? Why not whip up a meat loaf in your blender.

No, you don't put the meat in the blender, but your blender can make short work of everything else — chopping and mincing all those flavor-adders like celery, onions and pepper. If they won't eat vegetables in your house, meat loaf is the perfect place to hide them. Not great big tattleale chunks, naturally, but minced-up morsels that seem to snuggle into meat loaf and disappear. Except, of course, for the vitamins!

Minced vegetables are the perfect meat loaf stretcher, far better than empty-calorie bread crumbs. Bread crumbs add not only their own calories, but they soak up melting meat fat like a sponge and keep the fat calories from draining away as the meat loaf cooks.

To mince vegetables in your blender, cut them up in big chunks and then add them to the blender container, a little at a time, along with a half-cupful or so of cold water. Turn the blender on and off several times, just enough to chop the contents. (If you leave the blender on too long you'll wind up with a puree!) Drain the vegetables through a colander, pressing out the excess moisture. Save the water to use in diluting your sauce or gravy, if you make one.

Adding lots of minced vegetables help to keep a meat loaf moist. That's really important if you're a calorie-wise cook who chooses extra-lean, fat-trimmed ground round (612 calories per pound) for your meat loaf. . . instead of ordinary hamburger meat (up to 1,200 calories per pound).

Here's my very favorite Slim Gourmet meat loaf; it makes eight generous servings at only 181 calories each. It includes a lot more vegetables than most recipes, but no eggs and no starchy fillers. The flavor's so hearty that everyone loves it, dieting or not!

Slim Gourmet

- Blender-easy Meat Loaf pounds extra-lean round, trimmed of fat, ground
- 1 large onion
 - 1 clove of garlic, peeled
 - 2 large stalks of celery (including leaves)
 - 2 small (or 1 large)

- 1 green pepper
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 can (six-ounce) tomato paste

Cut the vegetables in big chunks and mince in your blender, adding a little cold water. Strain the vegetables and press out moisture.

Add two-thirds of the can of tomato paste to the chopped beef. Add the minced vegetables and toss lightly, combining well. Shape the meat into an oval loaf and place on a rack in a baking pan. Stir a little water into the remaining tomato paste and use this as a baste.

Bake the loaf in preheated 350-degree oven for one hour, basting occasionally.

Makes eight servings, 181 calories each.

(Is your house "Hamburger Heaven?" Stretch your budget — but not your seams — with more mini-calorie meat loaf ideas and chopped meat dishes. Conserve energy

Save money

By ANNE HINKEL
Asst. Home Economist

STROUDSBURG — The alert to conserve the use of electrical power has been sounded again this summer.

As consumers, we are usually reminded to cut back our use of electricity only after power shortages due to over-worked air conditioners occur. We should all be concerned with saving energy not only during summer months and warm Fall days but all year around. In most cases, if you make a habit of conserving power you'll also save yourself money by reducing your utility bills.

The following guidelines can reduce your energy use and save you money at the same time.

— When you use your oven, don't open the door unnecessarily. An oven can lose 20 per cent of its heat with each opening. Plan to bake two or more dishes at one time. Once your oven is heated, it can serve to brown rolls or as a warming unit for dishes to be reheated. It takes less fuel to reheat a dish than to cook it from the start.

— If your refrigerator requires defrosting, do so before the frost is 1/4-inch thick. More than a 1/4-inch thick covering of frost or ice acts as insulation and decreases efficiency of the refrigerator coils. Your refrigerator will have to increase its energy output to keep your foods cool or frozen.

— If you plan to buy a new refrigerator-freezer, remember that a frost-free model uses more power than a conventional type. If you're sold on the advantage of frost-free models, you may be able to save electricity when using another appliance. For example, during good weather, hang laundry out to dry rather than use an electric dryer.

— Run your dishwasher when you have a full load, preferable in the morning or late evening when temperatures are lower and demands on electricity are not so high.

— Be on the lookout for leaky hot water faucets. A leak that fills up a cup in 10 minutes wastes 328 gallons a year — water that took energy to heat.

— Make sure your house is well insulated. This is important in summer as well as in the winter. The use of storm windows can reduce cooling and heating bills up to 15 per cent.

— If your house is air conditioned, keep windows and doors closed. You don't want your air conditioner to be cooling the out-of-doors.

— Save chores that generate heat for the cooler mornings and late evening hours to make less work for the air conditioner.

— Turn off lights, radios and television sets when no one is in the room. Wasteful use of appliances not only uses electricity, but generates heat as well.

Don't wait for the next power shortage to consider these few suggestions. Get in to the habit of conserving energy every season of the year.

Country style theme of Pocono flower show

TANNERSVILLE — The Pocono Garden Club's annual flower show will open to the public at 3 p.m. on Wednesday in the Pocono Twp. Fire House, Tannersville and will be open until 9. The show will continue through Thursday with hours from 1 to 9 p.m.

Theme of the show this year is "Make Mine Country Style" with 12 classes ranging from "Milkin' Time" for arrangements in milk glass containers to "Call to Worship," twin exhibits suitable for a church altar.

The arrangements include "Strollin' Down the Lane" using wild flowers; "The Ole Oaken Bucket" using zinnias in a wooden container; "The Little Red Schoolhouse," a red arrangement; "Hoe Down" in a garden tool or accessory; "Turkey in the Straw" using dried materials or "Huskin' Bee" using flowers and corn.

"Ye Ole Swimmin' Hole," using flowers and foliage in a low container placed on a mirror; "Peekin' in the Corner Cupboard" with flowers in an antique container; "Last Rose of Summer" using one rose with any foliage; and "Reapin' of the Harvest" using flowers, fruits and-or vegetables.

There will also be four miniature classes using herbs in a pillbox, an arrangement in a salt dip, an arrangement in a cup and saucer and an arrangement in a toothpick holder.

The specimen flower schedule includes asters, calendula, celosia, cosmos, daisies, gaillardia, marigold, nasturtiums, petunia, phlox, scabiosa, snapdragons, salvia, and zinnia under the annuals and chrysanthemums, delphinium, gaillardia, lilies, phlox and bulb flowers under the perennials.

Under specialty flowers come dahlia, gladiolas, and roses. Under house plants ten varieties of African violets, ferns, flowering house plants, foliage plants and vines.

Both the arrangement and specimen classes are limited to members of the Pocono Garden Club with points being totaled for the sweepstake winner.

However, the junior classes are open to young people in the area to be judged in two age groups, those under ten. There are two classes for each age group.

The first is "Little Red Hen" with an arrangement in an egg shell. The second has two divisions: a breakfast tray arrangement for a sick doll; or a miniature garden in a cigar box with the lid held in an upright position to form a background for the garden with the box to be painted a suitable color.

Mrs. Esther Carson is president of the club and Mrs. Charles Besecker is chairman of the flower show.

The Platform: 'The American Party is committed to ...'

Preamble

The American Party of the United States of America gratefully acknowledges the Lord God as the Creator, Preserver, and Ruler of the Universe and of the Nation, hereby appeals to Him for aid, comfort, and continuing guidance in its efforts to preserve this nation as a government of the people, by the people, and for the people in this time of peril.

The American Party speaks for the majority of Americans, the hard-working, productive tax-paying citizens who constitute the strength of America.

No other party today speaks for the average American or expresses his concepts, hopes, and goals.

The average man today does not think of himself in ideological terms, such as liberal and conservative. Rather, the average man thinks in terms of the basic problems which confront him. He is concerned with the opportunity for gainful employment, educational opportunity for his children, the safety of his wife and child on the streets of his community, an equity in taxation which makes him neither the victim of those who by refusing to work have no income to tax, or the multi-millionaires who use tax loop-holes to avoid the payment of any taxes. He is concerned about the never-ending use of his sons for gunfodder in futile international involvements.

The platform of the American Party is a response to his desires, a voice which speaks for him as no other political party in America today so speaks.

No nation can survive if it fails to meet the problems which concern the average citizen. The American Party confronts these problems with the conviction that the little people of America are right and will be heard in a free Nation committed to Government of, by, and for the people. The people will ultimately have their way.

To these, the great American people, we offer this platform.

Domestic Policy

Local Government

The average man in America today believes in local, voter-controlled institutions of government.

The American Party is totally committed to the governmental framework embodied in the Constitution of the United States with its emphasis on a maximum of individual freedom and local autonomy. We are unalterably opposed to Federal domination of local institutions, particularly our public schools.

Individual Rights

The American Party speaks for individual freedom; the right of each citizen to the ownership of property and the control of his own property, the right to engage in business or participate in his labor union without governmental interference.

We shall steadfastly oppose Federal legislation permitting the Federal bureaucracy to tell a business man who he must hire or fire, tamper with Union seniority lists and apprenticeship programs or invade the individual's right of privacy.

We call for the elimination of government competition with free and competitive institutions.

Federal Judiciary

The greatest obstacles to the achievement by the average man of his goals and desires for America is the unrepresentative, unresponsive, dictatorial, federal judiciary.

The American Party would end judicial usurpation of the constitutional process by requiring federal judges at the district court level to be directly elected by the people, by requiring federal judges at the appellate level, including Supreme Court Justices, to be reconfirmed in their appointments every four years, and by limiting the appellate jurisdiction of the federal courts in state constitutional cases.

Protection from Crime

The American Party pledges full support to local law enforcement in their crusade to control crime; reforms in our judicial system to provide a speedy and just determination in criminal cases; and retention of the historic constitutional right of each state and the federal government to impose capital punishment for aggravated criminal offenses.

We support maximum penalties for the crime of skyjacking and political assassinations.

We support local control and financing of our local police forces and will oppose all attempts to establish federal control over them.

Drug Abuse

We oppose legalization of marijuana. We favor strong local and state laws making it a criminal offense with a mandatory jail sentence for anyone convicted of selling or supplying drugs, excepting for prescribed medical purposes.

The ultimate source of most hard drugs in the United States is the poppy fields of Red China. We deplore President Nixon's failure to take any meaningful action to stop the flow of hard drugs from Red China to the United States and pledge our full support to stop this assault on our American youth.

Respect for Life

The American Party recognizes that the first and most important role of government at any level is the protection of the right to life. The American Party opposes all attempts to liberalize any anti-abortion laws which laws, by their very nature, protect the lives of those innocents least able to defend themselves.

We are opposed to euthanasia, the so-called 'mercy killing' of the aged, ailing or infirm, by the administration of drugs or the withholding of medication essential to the patient's comfort or possible recovery.

We fully support laws providing criminal penalties for the unsolicited presentation or exhibition of obscenity, including any public display of homosexuality.

Gun Control

The Constitution of the United States affords to every citizen the right to keep and bear arms.

The lawless always acquire weapons and the result of disarming our citizens, coupled with judicial emasculation of local police protection, would be to leave the average citizen without protection from the lawless. We support a mandatory jail sentence for anyone using a firearm in the commission of a felony.

The American Party opposes laws which would deny the right of our citizens to own firearms.

Welfare

The American Party is sensitive to the needs of America's aged, blind and disabled citizens and fully supports state and local programs to enable these citizens to live in dignity and economic security.

We are unalterably opposed to tax supported subsidies to able-bodied persons who refuse to work, engage in welfare fraud, or utilize their reproductive capacities for the purpose of securing ever larger welfare payments.

We support all necessary statutory and administrative amendments necessary to achieve the complete elimination of rampant fraud in public assistance programs.

We oppose all federal funding in public assistance programs.

Social Security

The aged have been the principal victims of an irresponsible government fostered inflation. We support legislation to require the Federal government to protect Social Security Funds as a special trust, using those funds solely for the purpose of providing benefits to the beneficiaries. We support the removal of the earnings limitation of 62 and over in order that they may earn any amount of additional income.

We support the right of those entering the labor market to elect to participate in approved private retirement plans as an alternative to the Federal Social Security Program. Current studies establish that, at present rates, the same funds paid into Social Security over the average worker's productive life would produce, if paid into a private investment trust fund, a principal sum sufficient to provide the worker a retirement income at least several times larger than present Social Security benefits.

Health Care

We support cooperative efforts between private insurance carriers and private charitable institutions to provide low-cost medical insurance for the average citizen. We oppose any form of government controlled insurance.

We fully support the freedom of the citizen to choose his own physician.

We are particularly sensitive to the special needs of the handicapped and support state administered programs which offer these citizens the educational and employment opportunities to lead productive lives.

Inflation

Government created the problem of inflation by deficit spending and Government must be curbed in such further activity.

The American Party supports all steps necessary to halt the inflationary spiral, including putting the Federal Government on a pay-as-you-go basis and restoring a sound monetary standard by permitting the individual citizen to own and exchange gold, and the American Party advocates the abolition of the Federal Reserve System (a private corporation), and together with such abolition, the American Party advocates a return to the gold standard.

We object strongly to the policy of present and past administrations in blaming either the working man or the business man for the problem of inflation.

The imposition of wage and price controls, ostensibly established to curb inflation, is a fraud upon every citizen of America. We call for the removal of such fraudulent wage and price controls.

Taxation

The American Party supports immediate tax relief for the lower- and middle-income citizens of America, a closing of the tax loopholes for the ultra-rich, and taxation of the presently exempt foundations unless their purposes are narrowly limited to charitable pursuits.

We believe that the American Party should encourage the full consideration of a constitutional amendment reflecting long-standing and never refuted studies establishing that if the federal government is restricted to its constitutional functions, the present income, estate and gift tax programs can be eliminated at a proven profit of approximately 20 per cent to the average American wage earner.

Employment

The American Party would eliminate governmental red tape and restrictions which discourage the development and expansion of business enterprises which create job opportunities.

Consumer Protection

The American Party supports reasonable programs to provide protection for consumers and wage earners

THE AMERICAN PARTY (The Constitutional Party of Pennsylvania) adopted its platform for the 1972 Presidential Campaign by voice vote on August 4, 1972, at Freedom Hall in Louisville, Kentucky. Here are excerpts from that platform:

JOHN SCHMITZ
American Party
Candidate for President

against hazards to their health and safety.

Believing in free competitive enterprise, we are unrelenting in our opposition to government maintained monopolies which stifle competition. Where these monopolies exist, they must be strictly regulated to protect the public from unfair and arbitrary rate increases.

We are opposed to the use by those monopolies, such as, the telephone company, of its consumer derived revenues for political purposes for the direct or indirect influencing of elections.

Agriculture

We support the phased complete withdrawal of government controls, restrictions, and subsidies from agriculture within a period of three to five years, as we withdraw similar subsidies from other areas of American economic life.

To protect the American farmer from unjust foreign competition, we protest foreign imports from slave nations.

Labor

The American Party fully supports the advances made by the working people of America. We shall continue to support the right of workers to organize, bargain collectively, and control the internal affairs of their union organizations without Federal government interference. We oppose compulsory federally enforced arbitration on local unions.

The American Party recognizes that all retirement and pension programs are a deferred part of every workers' wage or salary. As such, all participation in retirement and pension programs should remain the property of every participating employee regardless of wherever he may be employed. We strongly support legislation, union agreements, or professional organization efforts to guarantee that interest. Every working man, union or non-union, waged or salaried, should be allowed to take his pension benefits with him to wherever he might be employed, from his first job to his last.

We support the right of rank and file union members to control the destiny of their own local unions through democratic processes.

There is no "acceptable" level of unemployment as is implied by the current philosophies of the Democrat and Republican Parties. The unalterable position of the American Party is that there is opportunity for full employment through the free enterprise system.

Education

The American Party fully supports the concept of quality education for every American child. We believe that education is a local responsibility and we are unalterably committed to the preservation of the neighborhood school without Federal control or interference. We believe that the educational dollar should be spent for improved classroom instruction, not for unproductive busing of pupils for purposes of social experimentation or racial balance. We strongly reaffirm our opposition to such busing, and to the transfer of teachers for such purposes.

We also support all necessary legislation to encourage the development of systems of private education including tax setoffs for parents who choose to place their children in private schools.

We support the concept of voluntary non-denominational prayer in the public schools. We would protect the right of an individual not to participate, but do not believe the minority has the right to bar participation by the majority in desired religious exercises. We will resist any and all attempts by governmental agencies such as H.E.W. and the National Institute on Mental Health et al, to use our educational systems to experiment with, or capture the minds and lives of our children through such programs as sex-education, sensitivity training and drug experimentation.

We favor placing our schools under the jurisdiction of parents and their local school boards, and school financing by state and local taxation.

The Environment

We support all reasonable efforts to solve the problems of air and water pollution, and America's other environmental maladies.

We do not believe that the solution to pollution can be found in destroying the private capital investment system, but rather by urging the enforcement of the common and statutory laws affecting these matters by the states and local enforcement agencies, and by the inventive genius of a free people in a competitive economic system.

Elections

The development of the American Party is dependent upon an opportunity to fully participate in the election process in the several states. We shall work for the elimination of discriminatory state laws which make it difficult or impossible for new parties to participate in the election process. We shall support judicial or legislative action wherever necessary to achieve this objective, including legislation enabling the name "American Party" to be used in every state.

We support full disclosure of campaign contributions and expenditures.

Government Secrecy

The American Party believes that government must be conducted in the full light of public scrutiny. Secrecy is the tool of dictatorship, not of government of, by and for the people. We pledge our full support to all necessary legislation to assure full disclosure to the people of the activities of their government, excepting for matters clearly in the interests of national security.

Regional Government

The American Party is unalterably opposed to the creation of regional government entities which exercises tax and police powers without direct responsibility to the voters and the taxpayers which such agencies are alleged to serve. Too often, the objective of those seeking to create such regional bodies is the destruction or usurpation of the authority of local or state governments.

In connection with necessary vigilance on the subject of regional government, we encourage a re-examination of the concept of zoning laws, which frequently are a thinly veiled transfer of power from private property owners to local collectivist planners.

Internal Subversion

The American Party expresses its undying opposition to the criminal Communist conspiracy and, in that regard, urges the enforcement of the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Women's Liberation

Although "Equal Rights" for women may seem a desirable objective, in practice it means great loss — not gain. We urge the people to notify their state legislators to resist adoption of the so-called "Equal Rights Amendment."

Public Housing

We oppose public, subsidized and scatter site housing in any neighborhood or community unless first approved by a majority of the voters in the precinct and in the municipality concerned.

Foreign Policy

National Sovereignty

We are . . . unalterably opposed to entangling alliances, via treaties or any other form of commitment, which compromise our national sovereignty. To this end we shall:

Steadfastly oppose American participation in any form of world government organization;

Call upon the President and Congress to terminate United States membership in the United Nations and its subsidiary organizations; and Propose that the Constitution be amended to prohibit the United States Government from entering any treaty or other agreement which makes any commitment of American military forces or tax money, compromises the sovereignty purpose properly the subject of domestic law.

Pacts and Agreements

Since World War II, the United States has increasingly played the undesirable role of an international policeman. Through our involvements abroad, our country is being changed from a republic to a world empire in which our freedoms are being sacrificed on an altar of international involvement. The United States is now committed by treaty to defend 42 foreign nations in all parts of the world, and by agreements other than treaties to defend at least 19 more. Therefore, we:

Call upon the President and the Congress to immediately commence a systematic withdrawal from these treaties and agreements unless such withdrawal would threaten the immediate national security of the United States.

Reaffirm our support of the Monroe Doctrine under which the United States has clearly stated its perpetual interest in the independence from foreign domination of the several republics of the Western Hemisphere, so that all expansionist powers will be forewarned of our commitment to the freedom of the Western Hemisphere from foreign domination.

Vietnam

The Executive Branch of our government, with the tacit approval of Congress, has involved us in an unconstitutional war in Vietnam which is contrary to the best interest of this nation. Through unbelievable mismanagement, or conscious design, the war has been prolonged, any goal of traditional military victory abandoned, and the enemy has been given privileged sanctuaries while over 50,000 American boys have been slaughtered on the battlefield.

Despite the fact that our nation became involved illegally in the Indo-China war there are, none the less, hundreds of valiant American servicemen now languishing in the prison camps of North Vietnam. America owes a duty and responsibility to these brave men and their families to force the Communist government of North Vietnam to release these American prisoners of war.

The American Party further demands that never again shall U.S. troops be employed on any foreign field of battle without a declaration of war by Congress as required by the U.S. Constitution; that Congress refuse to fund unconstitutional, undeclared wars pursuant to Presidential whim or international obligations under which American sovereignty has been transferred to multi-national agencies; and that such statutes be adopted as may be required to achieve these objectives.

We are unalterably opposed to any American aid to North Vietnam upon termination of our participation in Southeast Asian hostilities.

We oppose unequivocally any amnesty for military deserters and draft dodgers.

Relations With Communists

The American Party is deeply concerned by the President's recent accord with Communist China during the very hour when American boys are being killed by the Communist enemy in Vietnam. Instead of consorting with Communist governments, we believe that the United States should terminate all trade with, and aid to, Communist countries . . . We should provide moral encouragement to the peoples of captive nations whose homelands are presently oppressed by the Communist tyranny. We specifically urge the United States to reiterate its friendship for Nationalist China. We are unalterably opposed to any recognition of the Casto Communist government in Cuba.

We pledge not to interfere with Cuban exiles in their legitimate goals and aims of freeing their country from Communist tyranny.

We pledge to release all Cuban exiles held in United States jails for past activities connected with the liberation of their homeland.

Middle East

The American Party is unalterably opposed to American involvement in the Middle East conflict between Israel and Arab States. The United States has no interests in the Middle East which justifies the sacrifice of our sons on a desert battlefield nor is our country properly cast as a merchant of death in the Middle East arms race.

We therefore propose that:

America declare its neutrality in the Middle East; and that it

Repudiate any commitment expressed or implied to send U.S. troops to participate in the Middle East conflict.

South Africa, Rhodesia

As it is not the prerogative of foreign nations to determine the internal policies of the United States, so it is not our prerogative to dictate the internal policies of foreign countries. We should, therefore, declare our friendship with all nations who genuinely desire friendship with us. Consequently, we:

Call upon our government to cease its acts of hostility toward South Africa and Rhodesia, and, indeed, all other non-Communist countries who have by word and deed demonstrated their friendship for the United States;

Commend the Congress for its action in ending American participation in U.N. sanctions against Rhodesia as they apply to chrome and certain other strategic minerals; and Pledge to end the present administration's anti-Rhodesia the full diplomatic recognition to which that nation is clearly entitled.

Foreign Aid

Since World War II, the United States has been engaged in the greatest international giveaway program ever conceived by man, and is now spending over $32,000,000,000 a year to aid foreign nations. These expenditures have won us no friends and constitute a major drain on the resources of our taxpayers. Therefore, we demand that:

No further funds be appropriated for any kind of foreign aid programs;

United States participation in international lending institutions such as the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, be ended;

All government subsidies and investment guarantees to encourage U.S. businesses to invest in foreign lands be immediately terminated; and

All debts owed to the United States by foreign countries from previous wars be collected, by confiscation of property, if necessary.

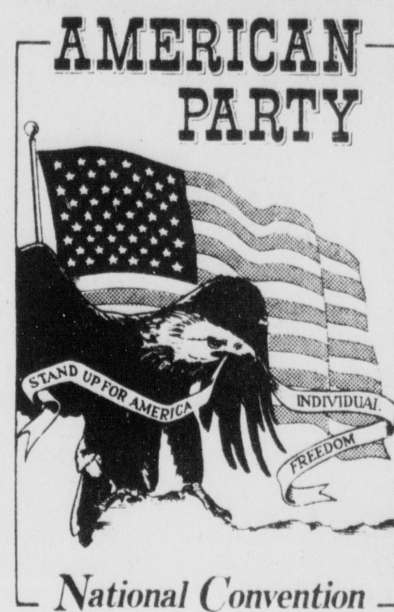

Tariffs and Trade

The American Party urges that Congress take all necessary action to protect American workers, framers and businessmen threatened by slave labor and foreign competition. Therefore, we urge that:

the United States cease participation in international tariff cutting organizations such as the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT); and that

That United States Government establish a firm policy that U.S. businesses investing abroad do so at their own risk and that there is no obligation by our Government to protect those investments with the lives of our sons, or the taxes of our citizens.

It is believed that the libertarian ideal of totally tariff free international trade is not realistic at this time in world history. We support restoration of America's place as a major sea power with a far ranging merchant fleet.

Immigration

Liberalization of American immigration laws is upsetting the labor balance in our country, and having an adverse effect on our economy. The mass importation of peoples with low standards of living threatens the wage structure of the American working man and, frequently, the political subversion of our American institutions. Therefore, we recommend that:

United States immigration laws be re-written to limit immigration to modest quotas of immigrants from European and Western Hemisphere countries and other people who share our general cultural traditions and background;

All other immigration be prohibited except in hardship cases or other special circumstance; and that

All immigrants be carefully screened to guarantee the loyalty to the United States of all persons entering this country.

State Department

The State Department for almost 40 years has been actively engaged in the promotion of internationalism contrary to the best interests of the United States. Therefore, we recommend that:

All necessary legislative and administrative action be taken to assure that every person serving in the State Department adheres to the objectives set forth in this platform; all persons found to be security risks be summarily discharged, defining sexual deviates and subversives as "security risks per se;"

All non-conforming functions, such as the Peace Corps, USIA, etc., be eliminated; and that

Our Government be prohibited from conducting secret negotiations or entering into secret treaties or agreements in any way binding on the United States.

Defense Policies

The American Party supports all necessary measures to provide full protection of the United States from any threat.

We recognize that it is impossible to restore fiscal responsibility to Government without a complete reappraisal of defense expenditures. We insist that all so called defense programs not directly related to the protection of our national security be eliminated; that every item of expenditure be carefully reviewed to eliminate waste, fraud, theft, inefficiency and excess profits from all defense contracts and military expenditures.

We are opposed to compulsory military training but support a well trained and highly organized volunteer state home militia. Since World War II, the domestic prosperity of the United States has been built upon a hot and cold war economy. In this context, war has become an integral part of the domestic economic policy of both the Democrat and Republican administrations. Therefore, we urge that:

The United States Government take immediate steps to encourage the reorientation of the economy to provide domestic prosperity without the artificial and inflationary stimulus of war and threats of war;

The United States Government continue to recognize the contribution of our servicemen to the national welfare by the extension of appropriate benefits to all veterans;

In any war in which our country engages, sufficient taxes be imposed to take the profit out of war, and to equalize the sacrifices of those at home with those called upon to fight on the battlefield abroad.

Disarmament

The principle of universal disarmament is a desirable goal. It can be achieved, however, only if all nations conform equally to disarmament agreements. There is no current evidence of a sincere desire by major world powers to disarm. Therefore, we recommend that:

Public Law 87-297, otherwise known as the Arms Control and Disarmament Act be repealed.

No further disarmament treaties be adopted in the absence of full evidence of good faith by all concerned powers, including the right of inspection and true equality of arms reductions;

No disarmament treaty be adopted involving the implied or expressed obligation of the United States to to war to enforce arms limitations, or to protect foreign nations jeopardized by powers violating disarmament agreements; and that

No disarmament treaty be adopted ganting to the United Nations the power to establish an international police force to enforce the provision to such treaty.

Opening lead — four of diamonds.

Let's assume you're in four hearts and West leads a diamond. How should you play the hand?

If you finessed the diamond, a perfectly natural thing to do, East would win and shift to a spade, forcing out your ace. You would then be in sad shape and eventually lose two spades, a diamond and a club to go down one.

You could dismiss the hand by attributing the outcome to bad luck — after all, West could have had the king of diamonds — but if you study the matter more closely you find that finessing the diamond is a bad move.

You have a much better chance for the contract by taking the ace of diamonds at trick one and playing a low club from dummy at trick two. In the actual hand, if you do this, you eventually make four hearts.

The best the enemy can do is win the club, cash the king of diamonds and shift to a spade. You win, play a club to the ace, ruff a club high, cash the A-K of trumps, ruff another club high, reenter dummy with a trump and discard one of your spades on the ten of clubs. Making four.

Played this way, you make the contract if the trumps are divided 2-2 or 3-1 and the clubs are divided either 3-3 or 4-2. You are much more likely to find the hearts and clubs divided in this manner than you are to find West with the king of diamonds, and hence rejecting the diamond finesse is the proper play.

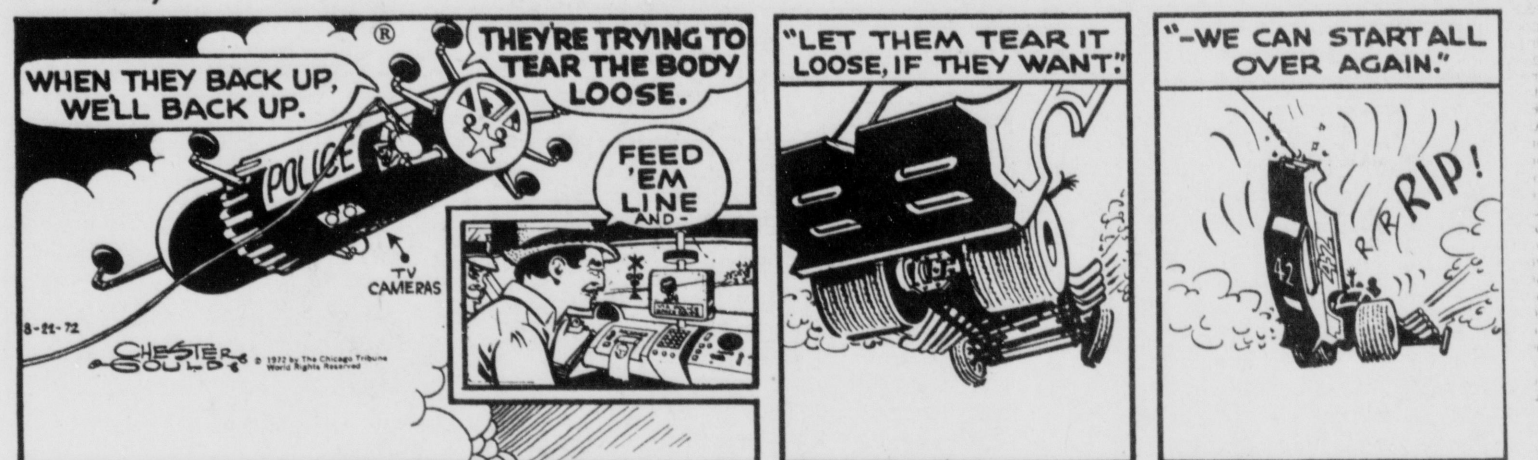

Note also that you must lead a low club from dummy at trick two, not the ace. If you were to lead the ace first, you would eventually go down one. If you don't believe it, try it and see what happens.

Easter Seal publishes pamphlet on strokes

STROUDSBURG — "Understanding Stroke," a new education leaflet for stroke victims, their families and friends, has been published by the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults to help clear up many commonly held misconceptions about one of man's oldest diseases.

Marywood troupe sets performance

BUCK HILL FALLS — The Marywood Players of Scranton will present a one-night performance of Bertolt Brecht's "The Three Penny Opera" at 8:30 p.m. Friday at The Inn at Buck Hill Falls.

This engagement marks a return to the Pocono Mountains for the Marywood thespians, having established themselves with a summer of repertoire last year at the Pocono Crest Little Theatre.

Last year, under the direction of Mrs. Mary F. Kelly, the group presented "The Fantasticks," "Mary, Mary," "Hedda Gabler," and "The Roar of the Greasepaint... The Smell of the Crowd."

Prior to booking the performance at Buck Hill, "The Three Penny Opera" was presented outdoors "under the stars" on the campus of Marywood College for eight performances.

Audience response was appreciative and Sig Benjamin, local drama critic, was prompted to write that "The Three Penny Opera" looks like a million dollars."

This internationally acclaimed musical, which includes the streetsinger's famous ballad of "Mack the Knife," is a colorful and controversial evening in the theatre.

Complete with a poignant romantic vein, the production offers some of Kurt Weill's most delightful ballads as well as some rousing production numbers.

Mrs. Kelly, director of the production, has three members of last summer's Pocono Crest company portraying major roles in the offering.

Cathy Whalen, remembered as Aunt Juju in "Hedda Gabler" and as The Mute in "The Fantasticks," plays Polly Peachum, a young bride who finds herself married to one of London's most sought-after criminals.

Kevin Kelly, who portrayed Sire in "The Roar of the Greasepaint... The Smell of the Crowd" and Eilert Loeberg in "Hedda Gabler," fills the role of J.J. Peachum, a corrupt owner of a beggars' establishment.

Keith Williams, who was The Old Actor in "The Fantasticks," portrays Tiger Brown, a questionable commissioner of police.

Steve James, a student at East Stroudsburg State College, plays The Street Singer who opens the show with "Mack the Knife."

Stan Wojewodski, a member of Catholic University's National Players' Touring Company, is Macheath, the slick, yet charming gangster who knows what he wants and usually gets it.

Veteran performer Ruth Judd, who began her acting career during the early days of radio, is Jenny Diver, one of Macheath's misused hopefuls, and Gail Piasecki, a member of Scranton's New Group Theatre, is Lucy Brown, a woman of questionable morale.

Tickets may be reserved by phoning The Inn at Buck Hill Falls, 595-2610.

Beautiful Brodhead

The chalk white waters of the Brodhead Creek Monday appear to be polluted beyond recovery, but the stream will actually be clear again in a few days as the waters diffuse a non-polluting, non-toxic discharge from Packaging Corporation of America, a paper firm in Delaware Water Gap.

Brodhead Creek discolored by non-polluting discharge

DELAWARE WATER GAP — A non-polluting discharge from the Packaging Corporation of America turned the rippling waters of the Brodhead Creek below the plant into a chalky white which slowly diffused to murky pale green downstream Monday.

A periodic happening in the stream running near Minisink Hills, the discoloration of the water presents no problem to stream life and is non-toxic.

According to Paul Kobal, of the Department of Environmental Resources in Kingston, the discoloration of the creek is well known to the state regulatory agency.

"It is strictly a paper waste and is not toxic," Kobal said. "I know there are minnows in the water just below the discharge. It is an esthetic thing more than anything else."

He said the plant had been put on notification by the DER's Industrial Waste Division in Harrisburg to comply with new standards of treatment which would eventually remove the discoloration from the discharge.

Kobal said he was surprised to hear the color is back in the water. He said the Packaging Corporation of America has been ordered to upgrade the treatment of their discharge and are now in the process of doing so.

Plant spokesman Robert Lippincott, technical superintendent, said the color comes from raw materials and materials used in brightening the plant's product — recycled paper.

Lippincott said the firm still has a DER permit to discharge and is currently involved in a broad-reaching program to upgrade treatment.

Under the standards set up by the DER, the firm would be required to reduce suspended solids in the discharge to 25 milligrams per liter.

Lippincott said the DER set level would reduce the solids in the discharge to roughly the content of drinking water. Firms dealing in paper products often come up against this problem he said.

Police raid porno sellers

STROUDSBURG — Acting on a complaint from the Monroe County District Attorney's office, Stroudsburg police Monday night confiscated a large quantity of pornographic literature during a raid on the Upper Story, a store at 581 Main St.

David McCutcheon, Cutcheon, N.J., was taken into custody and arraigned before Magistrate Graeden Praetorius on charges of selling pornographic materials. He was remanded to the Monroe County Jail in lieu of $500 bail for a hearing Friday before Praetorius.

District Attorney James F. Marsh said the investigation of the literature began after a Stroudsburg girl went into the store seeking to buy a comic book. "Instead, she was sold a pornographic book, which she took home," said Marsh.

"The girl's mother came across the book while cleaning and called my office inquiring what we could do about the matter. The book was full of portrayals of lewd sexual acts and perversions of all kinds, as well as rank language," said Marsh.

Marsh said he then called Stroudsburg police, who sent a man to his office to discuss such a raid. "We reviewed the Supreme Court guidelines on pornography and decided this book was atrocious. Stroudsburg Policeman John Rundle posed as an interested buyer and went into the store and bought another book. We then went down and knocked the place off," added the D.A.

He estimated that 25 to 30 books were confiscated by the raiding party, which was composed of four Stroudsburg policemen. Marsh also said the policemen were not looking for drugs during the time they nabbed the pornographic material.

"We weren't really looking for drugs, but we did discuss the possibility of such a search. There were a lot of things on sale at the store, so any drugs there could have been thoroughly hidden," added Marsh.

The District Attorney said the store sells "hash pipes, incense and sweaters, clothing which the well-dressed hippie would probably wear. After the raid, we locked the place up and left," he said.

Marsh said the store had a "whole pile of books just like the one the girl and the policeman bought."

"The books were full of indecent pictures of perverted sexual actions and all the books confiscated contained basically the same stuff. The books were just atrocious," commented Marsh.

MOUNT POCONO — The Pocono Mountain Board of Directors will meet in special session at 9 p.m. Wednesday in the Junior-Senior High School, Swiftwater.

Contract talk begins today between county and union

By GARY GROSSMAN
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Contract talks between Monroe County and the American Federation of State County and Municipal Employees representing Pleasant Valley Manor workers will begin this afternoon.

Although no disclosure has been made concerning the wage demands in the contract, the 19-page pact contains substantial proposals for fringe benefits and working conditions for the newly unionized county employees.

County Commission Chairman Mrs. Nancy B. Shukaitis said Monday she had received a copy of the contract, but had not had time to read it. She said the matter of union negotiations would be turned over to representatives of the commissioners.

Appearing on behalf of the county in the talks will be county solicitor Elmer D. Christine and specially hired labor attorney John Hayes, of Allentown.

Among the provisions in the contract is a demand for a five-day, eight-hour work week which may mean tight scheduling for the 24-hour operation at the home for the aged.

Fourteen paid holidays, meals to be provided for employees on all shifts, two weeks paid vacation after the first year up and to four weeks after 10 years, and time and a half pay for unscheduled and holiday work are all part of the contract.

One item contained in the pact — seniority rights — was an issue with the manor workers since they began organizing last December.

The contract calls for the implementation of seniority privileges including consideration in promotion and a proviso for "bumping" in the event of cutbacks in the labor force.

No demotions are allowed for disciplinary reasons and demotions can be employed by management only to avoid layoffs, according to the proposed contract.

Accumulation of sick leave on the basis of one and a half days for each month of employment should be compensated for cash upon separation from employment, according to the contract.

Sick days accumulated, but not used, should be exchangeable for cash according to rate of pay immediately prior to separation.

A five-day bereavement leave and a three-day personal leave each year are also in the proposed pact. Leaves for union activity and for education are also proposed.

Under wages, the contract provides for an unwritten wage scale and job classification to be included. Cost of living increases and longevity service pay are outlined in the proposal.

Other sections of the proposed contract cover overtime, employer-paid retirement, hospitalization and insurance, a three-step grievance procedure leading to arbitration, and the establishment of a labor-management committee and a safety committee.

Under the proposed contract, contracting and subcontracting public work would be prohibited. This section may affect the county's plan to lease facilities at private nursing facilities.

The contract represents the first formal agreement ever to be brought to negotiation between the county and its employees.

Although the pact covers only one department in county government, the union representing the workers at Pleasant Valley Manor has announced intentions to unionize all government workers in the county.

Former assessor backs levy

Occupation tax supported

STROUDSBURG — Former Monroe County Chief Assessor C.A. (Phyllis) Nauman Monday entered the occupation tax battle, defending his part in creating the manual used to determine assessments.

In an appearance before the Monroe County Commissioners Nauman related the process he went through in drawing up the manual in 1964-65.

He said he spent many hours on his own time contacting employers and conducting a survey throughout the county seeking "average monthly wages" for the hundreds of occupations contained in the manual.

Nauman said he realized by virtue of the use of "average monthly wages, the tax would not be fair to some persons, but he said "you can't make up for this difference."

Nauman said the manual was supposed to be updated every two years according to his plans. But Nauman left the office in 1966 without ever going through the update process.

"Just to say the job that should be done isn't being done doesn't make it a bad tax," Nauman said. He expressed disappointment over the fact he has not been consulted during the recent fray over the tax.

Blasts assessors

Nauman said the problem with the tax revolves around the fact occupation assessors do not do their job. Assessors are elected to their office.

"When I was chief assessor I tried to make life miserable for them so they wouldn't run again," Nauman said.

He said the tax should be maintained because it is a means of collecting revenue from persons who live in the county, but who do not stay long enough to acquire property. "You can't put all the taxes on the property owner," Nauman said.

Turning to the recent activity by the Monroe County Tax Study Committee against the tax, Nauman sounded his argument against the composition of the committee.

He stated political considerations enter into the appointment of members to the committee and termed it a "Popularity committee."

Later, Nauman conceded the law taxing occupations hasn't been enforced properly in 25 years. He said improvements were made in the collecting of the occupation tax during his term as county chief assessor.

He stated the problem with enforcing the occupation tax relates to the election of assessors and the protection it affords them.

Asked what good is a law that can't be enforced because the enforcement officers are elected, Nauman replied, "What good is having county commissioners?"

Voter registration controls slipping out of local hands

STROUDSBURG — Local control over voter registration is slipping away due to recent federal and pending state legislation, according to Monroe County Registrar Mrs. Cherry Rahn.

Back from a two-day election workshop in Harrisburg, Mrs. Rahn Monday reported to the Monroe County Commissioners on changes in the registration of voters and revised election procedures.

Under the Voters Rights Act of 1970, passed in the federal Congress, voters are now allowed to register by mail for national elections, but are permitted to vote only for the Presidential ticket, Mrs. Rahn said.

She said a move is now underway to have the law apply to all elections, thus eliminating the necessity for dual ballots.

A case pending in the courts would allow the county to begin registering members of the Communist Party for the first time if a petition carrying 40,000 signatures is upheld.

Mrs. Rahn said only the Republican, Democrat, Constitutional and Social Worker Parties are now registered.

Under the mailing provision of the federal statute Mrs. Rahn said persons who fled the country to evade the draft, but who are still citizens, have a right to vote in elections, according to information at the seminar.

Time schedules for absentee balloting have also fallen under revision due to recent legislation, Mrs. Rahn said. Any absentee ballot can be accepted until 4 p.m. the Monday before elections and any absentee ballot received until the closing time of polling booths Tuesday must be turned to an appointed commission for consideration.

Mrs. Rahn said the later deadlines for absentee ballots might allow more servicemen to get their votes in under the wire.

What problems may arise from the extended deadlines may be known after the November general election — the first test for most of the innovations.

Manpower study lacks response

STROUDSBURG — Almost two-thirds of the replies needed to complete a manpower survey in connection with the new vo-tech high school are missing.

The survey forms were mailed over a month ago by the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce to 100 local industries. The surveys asked about present employment and prospective employment with an eye toward preparing vo-tech students to best serve manpower needs.

Ralph Reppert, executive director of the Chamber, told directors Monday that only 37 forms had been returned. "We sent out a second notice last week and we'll send out another," said Reppert.

The Chamber would like to get at least 75 per cent returns to make the survey meaningful.

Joseph Small, vice president of the Chamber who presided at the meeting in the absence of President Jesse Flory, pointed out that even industries employing less than a dozen should reply to produce the cumulative effect desired.

Reppert also announced receipt of $1,044 from the state as an annual grant to Chambers based on a population formula.

Closing of school urged

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Association for Retarded Children has urged the Commonwealth to close a home for mentally retarded children in Hawley following a second accidental death there within the past several months.

Spokesmen for the PARC questioned the safety of Ridgeview, which was placed on probation by the state in June, and will continue on that status until Sept. 1.

A resident of the home drowned Sunday in his bath tub.

Mrs. Harry R. Clamp, association president said, "Because of these two incidents it is imperative that Ridgeview be closed until the physical plant can meet standards and appropriate staff and programs can be proposed."

"The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the Department of Welfare must be held responsible if they do not close this facility immediately."

Earlier this year, a 16-year-old student at the school was crushed to death in a garbage compactor while he and playmates were near the vehicle.

The school has been involved in controversy since the March 25, 1970 death of a third resident. Following the investigation of the death of Frank Dickerson, Wayne County Coroner Robert Jennings attempted to prosecute John Reilly, former owner of the school, which was known as Hillcrest, and John Butasek, a former male nurse at the school, on charges of murder.

Butasek has since been acquitted of the charge, while Reilly is scheduled to be tried. Reilly is presently out of the country in Europe where he is making arrangements for the care of a retarded child.

Camelot charms, enchants

By BOBBY WESTBROOK
TANNERSVILLE — The small stage at Camelback Summer Theatre with Merlin-like magic enlarged to include the whole audience at the opening performance of "Camelot" Monday night.

Roger Franklin who, in the role of King Arthur, had looked forward to performing there as an "opportunity to project the intimacy . . . to convey almost personally to all the audience the complexities of my role" did more than that.

He entered their hearts as well and carried with him the whole handsome, tuneful, talented resident company which has made the season at Camelback such a joyous experience for audiences.

"Camelot" is the show piece of the season, and it couldn't have been a happier choice. The story from T.H. White's

"The Once and Future King", with book and lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner and music by Frederick Loewe, has tenderness and tears, laughter and pomp and ceremony. . .

And a message which even the most callous must catch as Arthur, destined for a kingship he never sought, took the audience with him in the painful process of learning to think and mature to be "civilized" in turning "might for the right".

Maturing, too, were Jacqueline Johnson, in the role of Guenivere, who is not only beautiful as a queen should be but has a beautiful voice.

John Kordel was spectacularly handsome as Lancelot and did a handsome job of progressing from self-anointed sainthood to humanity in the role.

But it would be hard to fault any one of the characters. Doubling in the roles of Merlin and Pellinore, F. Lawrence Randall won laughter and an ovation — although he was upstaged by one scene-stealer, the dog whose performance must have made his owner, Joan Toms, glow with pride.

John Hinde, assistant stage manager, also played the role of the despicable mordred with satisfactory hatefulness and Jeanne Schlegel was magnificent as Morgan LeFey.

The music, of course, is always memorable. "Camelot" and "If I Ever Leave You" have become classics, but you wonder why we don't hear more of "Follow Me" "C'est Moi", "The Lusty Month of May", "I Loved You Once in Silence" or the others.

But all of the large cast were great: David Vosburgh, Robert DeCapo, Sharon Stuart, Alyson Tanner, Rosilind Breslow, Marsha Warner, D.G. Clark, James Moses, Richard Sabellico and all the others who have become familiar this summer in roles large and small.

'Lovers' battle on Pocono stage

BY PAT MCCAIN WILLIAMS
MOUNTAINHOME — "Lovers and Others Strangers", a short series of vignettes on the battle of the sexes, Monday night at Pocono Playhouse made the members of the audience feel like war correspondents and every one of them could identify with one of the incidents.

Tom Poston, who has spent a lot of time billed as a comedian may just find himself working as dramatic actor if he isn't careful. Several times during the second act Poston added a warmth and sensitivity beyond the call of a comedy role. It was well done and much appreciated.

The rest of the time when Poston was on stage he and saucy Abby Dalton each played one sex and had such a good time doing it that the other enjoyed as much as the audience did.

The only hold-up in the various sorties was the switch of settings that were done so well by Ken Lewis which were lighted by Dan Willoughby. This does not imply that Lewis or Willoughby did a poor job, rather both were up to expectations and the necessary pauses between scenes allowed the audience to shift gears for the next episode.

Tom Poston is a funny, funny man. He adds to this comedy sense in awareness of the possibilities between male and female and comes up with not just an entertaining evening but a very warm feeling for him.

And then there is Miss Dalton who without alcohol could give anybody a glow as she helps Poston romp through the various confrontations which end in a sage remark referring to the battle which was joined in the first act, "married people should enjoy each other".

Marvin Lichterman and Margaret Linn, as supporting players have read score cards on boy-girl skirmishes too, and, having done their homework, are funny and enjoyable in their roles.

"Lovers and Other Strangers" is a play that runs the gamut from the first meeting to the pre-marital jitters to the rocky marriage and ends with advice from one marriage to another. With all the wit and humor, Poston and Miss Dalton with their supporting cast manage to convince the audience that this was not a separate peace and it isn't necessary to have winners or losers as the curtain comes down.

Ross Decker is interested in automobiles. He's a mechanic in a local garage and keeps up on the latest auto news.

While thumbing through a magazine recently, Decker, who lives at 110 Linden St., Stroudsburg, came across some information on something called Carcraft First Annual Street Machine Nationals in Memphis.

Included in the competition "for anything which would run on the streets" were various classes that took in part of road racing and other forms of action.

Decker got hold of his friend, Conrad Janusz of 1004 Main St., Stroudsburg, and decided to enter.

"We just felt like going down," Decker said.

The pair climbed into Decker's 1963 Ford Fairlane and headed for Memphis. It cost the pair $180 in travel expenses and another $15 entry fee. The car need no preparation.

Decker and Janusz entered the "rod run" and finished third. Decker said the "rod run" was "sort of like a road course with checkpoints."

The standard, set by the judges, was 58 minutes. The pair took 80 minutes and finished third.

Next year's competition will be either in Dallas or Denver. Will Decker be there?

"I wouldn't miss it for anything," he said. "It's too much of a ball."

John Ferreebe of East Stroudsburg, one of the strong contenders on the Pocono 21 turn, missed the first stop of the season. Chances are if he had competed he would be in a dog-fight with Keith Wilson for the championship.

Ferreebe missed the first stop at Glen Brook due to an eye infection. He came back the next week and finished fourth. Since then he's won twice, tied for a third title and finished second.

The tight economic picture has struck Bangor. The district's school board, after much debate, decided last week to drop golf. All scheduled matches for next season have been forfeited.

Carlton's string finally runs out; Braves top Phillies in 11th inning

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The pressure is finally off Steve Carlton.

The Philadelphia Phillies' big lefthander was headed closer to a major league victory Monday night at Veterans Stadium.

But Mike Lum lined a broken-bat single into centerfield with two outs in the 11th inning to score Dusty Baker with what proved to be the winning run as the Atlanta Braves halted Carlton's winning streak at 15 games with a 2-1 victory before 52,662 fans.

Carlton, who was trying to extend his mark as the winningest lefthander in modern Phillies history, was trying to edge closer to Rube Marquard's record of 19 consecutive wins set in 1912.

Carlton's loss was his seventh against 20 victories — he's the first Phillie to win 20 games since Chris Short did it in 1966 — and was the first since he was beaten by the New York Mets May 30.

Carlton, who was named the National League's player of the week earlier in the day, was trying to near the Phillies all-time win record by a lefthander set by Eppa Rixey in 1916 when he went 22-10.

The last time any Philadelphia pitcher won more than Carlton was in 1955 when Robin Roberts won 23 against 14 losses.

Carlton, who had set down 19 batters without a hit after Felix Millan doubled in the fifth inning, got into trouble after striking out Hank Aaron for the third time — the 10th strikeout for Carlton, the majors leader in that department.

Baker lined a double into rightcenter and after Earl Williams was intentionally walked, Lum lined his game-winning single.

Phil Niekro, who was in trouble several times but struck out nine with a dazzling knuckleball that Williams was unable to handle, picked up his 12th victory against 10 defeats.

The Phillies tied the game in the eighth when Willie Montanez and Greg Luzinski hit back to back doubles to open the inning. Then, aided by an error by Millan at second, the Phils loaded the bases with two outs, but failed to score again.

Atlanta ended a string of 29 scoreless innings in the third when, with two outs, Millan doubled and scored on Aaron's single to center.

A's regain lead; East race closes

DETROIT (UPI)—Jim Hunter and Rollie Fingers pitched the Oakland A's back into first place in the American League West and tightened up the Eastern Division race at the same time Monday night with an eight-hit, 5-1 win over the Detroit Tigers.

The A's are now a half game in front of idle Chicago while Detroit holds the same margin over Baltimore in the other division.

Woody Fryman lost his first

AL game after three wins when Oakland jumped on him for three runs in the first inning.

Bert Campaneris, who entered the game with a streak of six games with at least two hits, stretched it to seven with a three-hit performance in which he scored twice. Campaneris doubled to open the game, stole third and scored on the first of four hits which Joe Rudi used to take over the league batting leadership with a .320 batting average.

African nations threaten mass pullout over Rhodesia

MUNICH (UPI)—All African nations entered in the Olympic games will withdraw if Rhodesia is allowed to participate, the secretary general of the National Olympic Committee of Africa (NOCA) said Monday night.

Jean Claude Gaga of the Congo said 32 to 35 teams would withdraw rather than compete against Rhodesia in protest to Rhodesia's racist policies.

Gaga said the NOCA resolution to leave was presented to the International Olympic Committee (IOC) earlier Monday. The teams which would go home include Kenya and Ethiopia, who have some of the world's top middle distance and distance runners.

These include Kip Keino, defending champion in the 1,500 meters; Naftali Temu, defending champion in the 10,000 meters, both of Kenya; Mamo Walde of Ethiopia, defending champion in the marathon, and Amos Biwott of Kenya, defending champ in the 3,000 meter steeplechase. None of the other African nations have any medal candidates.

Several black American track stars also have threatened to walk out if the Rhodesians participate.

The resolution dropped by the NOCA is the latest pressure brought against the IOC on the Rhodesian question. The United Nations earlier became involved by demanding the Germans to explain how the Rhodesians entered Germany without passports.

Rhodesia has been under UN sanction.

In New York, the sanctions committee of the UN Security Council said it "considered the entry into the Federal Republic of Germany by members of this (Rhodesian) Olympic team, whether or not they are bearers of Olympic identity cards, provides the possibility of conflict with the provisions" of the UN sanction against Rhodesia.

With only five days before the traditional opening ceremonies, Avery Brundage, the 84-year-old IOC president who will retire at the end of the games, toiled in vain to resolve the dilemma. After meeting with the African nations, the IOC met with Rhodesia and then went into a closed-door session attended by 72 of the 73 Congress members.

Willie Daume, chairman of the German Olympic Committee, said there was no hope for a compromise.

"It will be a straight vote for or against Rhodesia's competing," Daume said. "All the emotion that has built up in African countries over hundreds of years came out in the debate."

A spokesman said the discussion was emotional but orderly. "Everyone wanted to have his say, and views were forcefully expressed," the spokesman said.

Ethiopia, the one nation which has formally expressed its intention to withdraw, had been scheduled to leave on a mid-afternoon flight to Rome, but scratched that and rescheduled the departure for today.

"My team is packed and ready to leave," said Desta Girma, chef d'equipe of the Ethiopian team. "The only decision we are prepared to accept is that the invitation to Rhodesia to compete in the Games is withdrawn."

Clifford Buck, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, also delayed presenting to the I.O.C. a statement drawn up Sunday by members of the U.S. track and field team on the situation. A U.S. spokesman said, "The statement will wait on the decision. Obviously, the statement is not necessary if Rhodesia is no longer in the Games."

Brundage at one point in the day asked the British Government to clarify its position on Rhodesia. Although Rhodesia has expelled British control, the Rhodesians agreed to compete here under their old flag as a British colony, under the old name of "Southern Rhodesia," and to have "God Save the Queen" played for any Rhodesian victory.

A British spokesman stressed that Britain still considers Rhodesia a colony and Rhodesians as British subjects.

All athletes and officials were admitted to West Germany for the Games on Olympic identity cards only, with no passports necessary. Rhodesia's adversaries claim this system was designed simply to admit the Rhodesians, since they cannot present British passports.

Ossie Plasket, head of the Rhodesian team, said, "We'll abide by whatever the I.O.C. says. We've always gone by every little rule and we'll continue to do as they say."

Almost unnoticed in all this turmoil, the athletes sweated and toiled to get ready for the 15 days of competition.

U.S. track and field hopes suffered a setback when Dave Wottle of Bowling Green, entered in both the 800-meter run and the 1,500-meter run, revealed that he is suffering from tendonitis in his legs.

"I can't keep my shape, so it doesn't look good for the 1,500," the downhearted Wottle said. "I still have an outside chance in the 800."

Saylorsburg clinches tie for title

Head of Chicago team says blockage of Hull 'immoral'

SAYLORSBURG — Saylorsburg clinched a tie for the Pocono Mountain League title Sunday by sweeping a doubleheader from West End.

Glen Bisbing drove in six runs with three hits, including two home runs, to lead Saylorsburg to a 12-3 win in the first game. Ron Spinner and Al McCormick each had four hits in a 22-1 win in the second game.

Readers scored seven runs in the fifth inning and went on to beat Kunkletown, 7-6, in the first game of a doubleheader and came back for an 11-2 win in the second.

CHICAGO (UPI)—The president of the Chicago Cougars said Monday that a lawsuit filed by the Chicago Black Hawks to block Bobby Hull from playing in the new World Hockey Association is an "immoral" move against hockey fans.

Walter Kaiser, president of the Cougars, Chicago entry in the WHA, also said, "We feel that the position the National Hockey League has taken is legally unsound."

The Hawks of the NHL filed suit late Friday to keep Hull from playing with the WHA's Winnipeg Jets, who signed the Black Hawks star to a 10-year, estimated $2.75 million contract.

The suit, which will be heard by Cook County Circuit Court Judge Francis T. Delaney Wednesday, charged Hull with breach of contract and asked that he be enjoined from playing for anyone but the Chicago NHL club.

The Hawks contend they still have an option on Hull's services for the 1972-73 season. They said Hull's defection would cause the club "irreparable damages" both at the box office and on the rink.

Hull said he wasn't "upset at all" by the suit. He said that when he signed with the Jets "everyone appreciated there could be some legal repercussions."

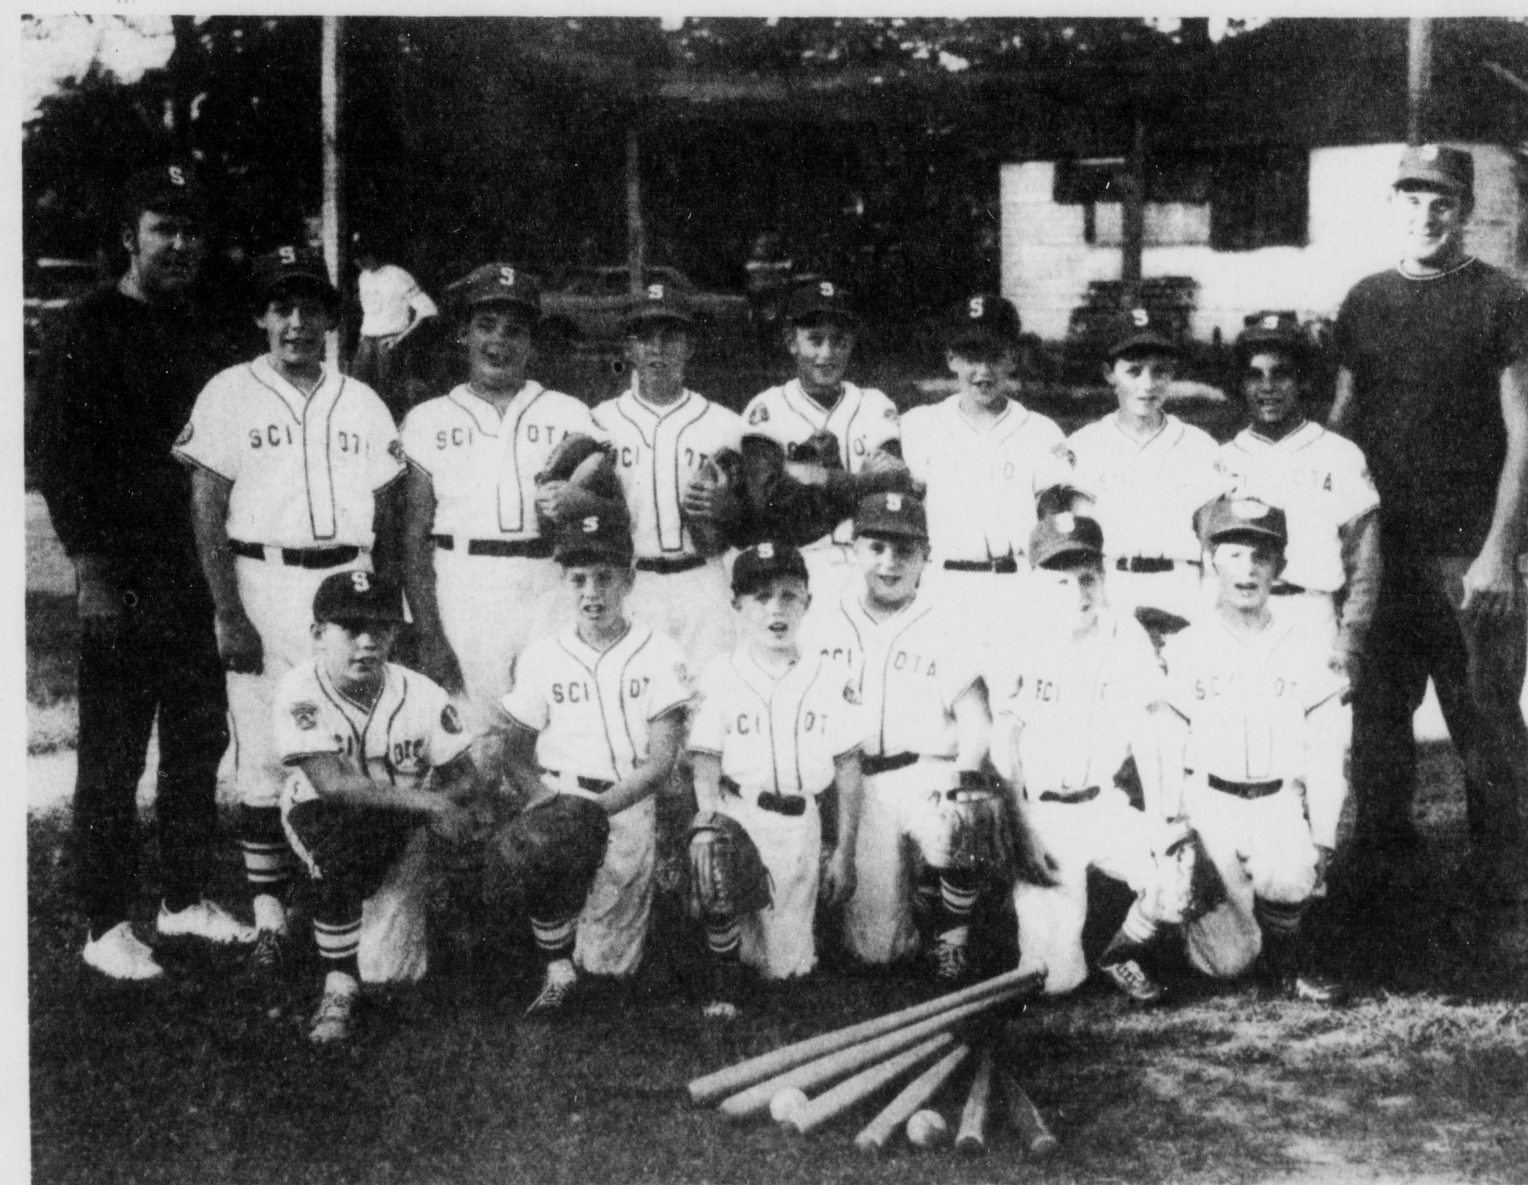

"The fans would be the real losers," Kaiser said, "if the NHL were to be successful in its attempt to maintain its monopoly."

He said, "It would be immoral to deny hockey fans the opportunity to see Hull ... and other NHL stars who have been liberated by the WHA."

Don Milich took a first and two seconds Sunday to lead the Monroe County YMCA entry in the first annual Lake Naomi invitational swim meet.

The Stroudsburg YMCA entered 12 of the 13 boys events and place in nine. It also placed in both girls' events it entered.

Milich won the 25-yard breaststroke in the 12 and under class and finished second in the 50-yard freestyle and 25-yard backstroke. Paul Porter won the 25-yard breaststroke in the 10 and under while Jamie Spring took the 25-yard freestyle in the eight and under class.

Leader with one stop remaining

Wilson nears crown in Pocono 21

STROUBS — It's all over but the shouting for Keith Wilson.

Wilson, the Pen Argyl golfer who won the District 11 title last year, has all but wrapped up the 1972 Pocono 21 golf tour title.

With just a stop left at Tamiment Thursday, Wilson, who will enter East Stroudsburg State College next month, has 138 points. In seven stops on the amateur tour, he has won twice, tied for a third time, finished second twice and placed third and sixth.

John Ferrebee of East Stroudsburg has virtually clinched second place. Ferrebee, who missed the first stop at Glen Brook, has 119 points including a victory last week at Terra Greens. He also won once and tied Wilson at Buck Hill for the title. He has finished second once and fourth twice.

Scott Zukowski of East Stroudsburg and Stroudsburg's Jim Kitchen are tied for third place with 104 points. The pair tied for third place last week.

In order for Ferrebee to win the title he will have to win Thursday and Wilson will have to finish in 20th place. But since the tour has been able to attract only about 15 players weekly, the chances are slim he will lose the crown.

Mike Solliday holds down fifth place with 100 points. His best finish on the tour was third place at Pocono Manor.

Joe DeRoo is in sixth place with 93 points. He finished sixth at Glen Brook on the first stop for his best showing of the season.

In seventh place is Stroudsburg's John Kupiec with 83 points. Playing his home Glen Brook course, he ended fifth for his best finish of the year. Jim Trinchera is in eighth place with 80 points including a fourth place finish at Shawnee for his top performance.

Joe McCluskey of Stroudsburg holds down ninth place with 79 points. His best finish was at Buck Hill, where he finished fifth. Dave Deihl of Stroudsburg rounds out the top 10 with 68 points. His best show was at Shawnee, where he ended eighth.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Showbiz psychologists think Diahann Carroll's dates with a record exec mean the David Frost idyll defrosted . . . Danny Wolfe's desperate attempts to reconcile with Aliza Kashi fell on deaf shell-like ears . . . In "21," NBC's Girl for Today, Barbara Walters, recently separated, dined with RCA Chairman Bob Sarnoff . . . Chicago billionaire Clement Stone, who gave the '68 Nixon campaign a full million-dollar push, is being mentioned as our next ambassador to England; he could have had it last time but refused all political plums.

As a TV guest, Bette Davis is tough, wise and gracious . . . Has a kind of free-swinging candor that reminds us of Eleanor Holm . . . Years ago we dined with Eleanor and Billy Rose, the guests also including Bennett Cerf, Oscar Hammerstein 2nd, the Dewitt (Reader's Digest) Wallaces, the composer Chester Conns, and everyone commented on the great grub . . . Billy stuffily ordered the butler to "give my regards to the chef"; which momentary embarrassment at the pretentious among the guests was alleviated by Eleanor advising Billy: "Ah, shaddup!" . . . One dinnertime Eleanor was extremely gracious to playwright Ferenc Molnar, and because of his heavy accent was pronouncing each word with precise slowness . . . Molnar smiled: "But my dear Eleanor, you are talking to me as if I am a puppy." . . . The most civilized part of Rose's life was his decade wed to Eleanor.

Actress Carol Lynley and her ex-husband Mike Selsman have a hassle over alimony . . . Woody Allen didn't like it too much when Steve Allen hogged the piano for 20 minutes at Michael's Pub where Woody's clarinet is the once-a-weekly come-on . . . Big band virtuosi Peeewe Irwin and Chris Griffin daylight running a music school in northern New Jersey; let their pupils know — they know, they know! . . . Arlene Dahl, who has the proper pulchritudinous credentials, says "American women are crazy. They shower so much their skins dry out." Arlene's cleaning up as Sears' beauty expert. But Sears also sells showers, Arlene.

Why does Andy Warhol love Jackie's sister "Princess" Lee Radziwill. Because she rented his Long Island estate at a nifty price . . . The Leo Durochers at Top of the Park restaurant said they're looking for a home in Palm Springs . . . Leo's baseball-pension is one of the biggest in baseball history . . . Backgammon champ Tim Holland (he once, which was enough, was wed to Johnny Carson's new no doubt eternal flame Joanna Holland) formed the International Backgammon Association with Serge Obolensky and Hugh Hefner . . . It's hotter than chess in most places: London's Clermont Club has games at $2,500 a point — and stakes double and redouble. "Badge 373" unreels a dope raid here which turns into a million-dollar gun smuggling racket. It's based on fact, but names were changed to protect the federal undercover man . . . The Tall Texan legend suffered a trifle in Ireland; the John Barleycorn pub owner here, Terry O'Neill, also owns one in Cork and has a Texas-born bartender there, name of Courtney — who is just four-eleven . . . The French interior director Zsa Zsa hired as secretary was mentioned as being merely Zsa's male escort, so she solved that one: fired him . . . Redheaded Jill St. John bought a couple of incognitos at Michael Kazan's — a blonde and a brunette wig . . . Famous young stage-screen actress at Jimmy Weston's had a plate of steak thumbs for openers, a T-bone for her entree and a filet mignon as dessert. Her musician mate almost clinkered. Whitney Balliett's New Yorker profile of jazz trumpeter Bobby Hackett is the finest reflection of that world's greatest hornman we've ever read (except herein, of course!)

John Gambling, the highest paid radio performer (WOR-New York) in the business ($450,000 a year) gave away his dearest tax deduction last weekend when daughter Ann wed Chris Janelli: the kids will continue — for bachelor degrees yet! — at Lake Forest, Ill., College.

Ann Landers

Words of wisdom

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a woman who was furious because her "best friend" had given her a recipe that called for $4 worth of ingredients and the casserole was a failure. She considered it a crummy trick and said, "If a person doesn't want to give a recipe, she should say so and not phony up something that is sure to fail."

I ran across a verse that I'd like to dedicate to "Betrayed in Birmingham":
She didn't have potatoes
So she used a cup of rice.
She couldn't find paprika
So she used some other spice.
Tomatoes weren't in season.
So she used tomatoe paste.
The WHOLE can, not a cup, dear —
She couldn't bear to waste.
And now she isn't speaking;
She's convinced I pulled a fast one.
So don't ask for my recipe.
That one was the last one.

Dear Friend: Women who give recipes should attach a note: "No substitution or this recipe could be injurious to our friendship."

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married seven years to a swell guy who says he loves me more than anything in the world and I believe him. I have no evidence that he has ever cheated on me. In fact, I would never give it a thought except for one thing. I keep finding names, addresses and telephone numbers in his pockets. When I ask him what gives, he says, "Oh that. The guy at the plant keep offering to fix me up and I don't want to hurt their feelings by telling them I'm not interested." Then he throws the slips away. What do you make of it?

reaction out of you. If you will just pass off their remarks about your nose, if you will smile quietly instead of getting upset at their teasing, they will let it drop.

When you are older you may want to have cosmetic surgery on your nose. But by then you will probably see that it's not that important.

THRUST: (Q.) In history class just before school was out we had a sort of debate about Vietnam. One boy said if it was up to him he would just kill them all. I said that would be horrible.

I didn't think he was serious, but he must have been. I sat two chairs in front of him and from then on when I would turn to talk to the girl behind me and in front of him he would say, "Shut up and turn around."

In drivers' ed one day he told me he hated my guts. He said some more things I can't write down.

All summer I have been crying when I think about him. I kinda think I like him, but I don't want to if he hates me.

Crying in Connecticut

(A.) This boy took an extreme position, one he could not defend with reason or honor. You mowed him down. To him, it was probably as if you had told the class he was lacking in manhood.

But what you said opened his eyes to the fact that he was wrong. He was ashamed but not ready to admit it. So he took it out on you. You hurt. He liked seeing you hurt.

In time, in all likelihood, the boy will see the world with more reason and less emotion. Right now he is twisted inside. Don't let him twist you.

NOSE: (Q.) People call me Schnoz. It's because of my nose. It's so embarrassing. It really hurts. I'm ready to cry. What can I do?

QUESTIONS I GET ABOUT U.S. SAVINGS BONDS

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. We are in our late 40s, both working now that our three children are grown, and still find that at the start of a new year we're no better off, financially, than we were a year ago. No investments; no savings. Money just seems to dribble through our fingers. What would you suggest?

A. I can't think of any device which would force you into the nearest savings bank on pay day. BUT, I certainly favor a system which would help you put money aside BEFORE you get your wages: A Payroll Savings Plan which would deduct X dollars a week from your wages to be put into Series E Savings Bonds.

The U. S. Treasury is conducting its 1971 Savings Bonds drive. Leading executives of American business and industry are engaged in a campaign to boost 1971 payroll savings deductions for E Bonds by 10 percent over last year's goal.

These men are engaged in a patriotic endeavor — which is fine. What I'm suggesting, however, is that you do something for yourself by building a nest egg this "painless" way; that is, by putting a portion of your wages into tax-deferred E Bonds BEFORE you get it. You'll be surprised at the way the money mounts up.

Q. We are newlyweds, both employed and in a high tax bracket. Our parents argue we ought to build up a nest egg before going into stocks. But the income taxes on the interest cut our effective return down to about 3 percent. Shouldn't we buy low-yield stocks?

A. Not until you acquire a substantial nest egg — as your parents advise. If your joint income puts you into a high tax bracket, your logical "nest egg" medium is U. S. Savings Bonds.

You can get at the money in a moment; they grow at the rate of 5 percent, plus ½ of 1 percent at maturity; they are 100 percent backed by the U. S. Government, AND the accumulation of interest doesn't cost you a penny in Federal income tax until such time as you cash in the E Bonds. (U. S. Savings Bonds are exempt from state and local income and personal property taxes.)

Q. Hasn't the time run out for some of the older E Bonds?

A. No. All outstanding E and H Savings Bonds are still earning interest. The Treasury recently announced a third 10-year extension for E Bonds issued from May 1941 through April 1952, a second 10-year extension for E Bonds issued from May 1952 through January 1957, and a second 10-year extension for H Bonds issued from June 1952 through January 1957. Incidentally, Freedom Shares—sold in combination with E Bonds from May 1967 through June 1970—have been granted a 10-year extension, so they, too, will continue to earn interest.

Q. Should I cash in my old E Bonds and buy new ones paying the higher rate?

A. No. The Treasury Department has advised against this procedure. All outstanding Savings Bonds—regardless of age—have had their yields improved so that they, too, benefit from the "bonus" rate. Further, if you redeemed your older Bonds, you'd be subject to income tax on the accrued interest, and could actually suffer a setback.
